CIRCLING the CIRCLE

—Many a sweltering summer day you're going to wish for the good old crispy wintertime.

—The King of Arabia has 24 wives. He recently bought an automobile. If he's wise, he'll let one of 'em drive it.

—When a woman doesn't smoke these days it's almost a safe bet she's pretty wild.

—Some bankers don't like to leave their assets out too long, probably because they fear the darn things will get frozen.

—Our idea of superfluous entertainment is a husband-calling contest. A wife-calling contest might be a terrible flop but it would be news.

—The fall of Adam and Eve more likely was due to a banana than an apple, scientists now tell us. Well, maybe it was a banana and they forgot to pick up the peel.

—Newspapers are peculiar sometimes. For instance they insist on mentioning George Haldeman, who was only a pilot for the trans-Atlantic flier, Ruth Elder.

—The plan to offer a prize for the best finishing touches submitted for Schubert's Unfinished Symphony should be carried further. How about a nice pair of arms for the Venus de Milo?

—Having seen pictures of both Madame Lupescu and Princess Helen of Roumania, most American men have long been convinced that Prince Carol wasn't quite all there.

—The seventeenth amendment to the constitution was adopted on May 31, 1923. Prior to this time the United States senators had been selected by the legislatures and not by popular vote as they now are.

—Mayor Thompson of Chicago cited one of those British history books they've been using in Chicago, in which George Washington was called a rebel. Well, you certainly can't say George was a Tory!

—The largest meteor ever found in the United States is 10 feet long, 6½ feet high, and 4 feet, 3 inches thick. It weighs 31,107 pounds. It was found at Willamette, Ore., in 1902, and is now in the American Museum of Natural history, New York.

—The Metropolitan theatre here is certainly playing real, up-to-the-minute and popular pictures. A nationwide poll conducted showed that seven out of ten of the most popular pictures of the year were played in Circleville by the Met or will be played. The list is: Beau Geste, Big Parade, What Price Glory, Way of the Flesh, Ben Hur, Seventh Heaven, Chang, Underworld, Resurrection, and Flesh and the Devil.

AD BRINGS HER RESULTS!

A Circleville woman, Mrs. Fred Donnelly, 127 Pinkney street, believes in the classified ad department of The Circleville Herald. She inserted an ad advertising a gas stove and a rug for sale. Shortly after the newspaper was out she sold the stove and had the promise of selling the rug.

These little ads cost but one cent a word. Do like Mrs. Donnelly did—if you want to sell something, advertise it.

"The Fox" Declared Sane When He Killed Child

QUICK VERDICT GIVEN BY JURY IN NOTED CASE

Noose or Life Sentence Will
Be Pronounced Saturday
By Trial Judge.

By ARTHUR L. MAREK
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 10.—While the spectre of the gallows hovered over the head of William Edward Hickman, awaiting sentence for the kidnaping and killing of 12-year-old Marion Parker, a new fight for his life was launched by his attorneys today.

Declared by a jury of four women and eight men to have been sane when he stole and slew the little school girl, Hickman's only hope of escape from the noose lies in the appeal which Jerome Walsh, his chief attorney, announced he would make from Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco's expected sentence.

The remorseless youth who bartered the mutilated body of his little victim for $1,500 ransom, will be brought before Judge Trabucco tomorrow morning to hear sentence imposed. His sentence will be either death on the scaffold or life imprisonment, depending upon Judge Trabucco's determination of his degree of guilt.

To Ask New Trial

Walsh has announced that he will move for a new trial when Hickman is arraigned for sentence. This motion is expected to pave the way for an appeal from the convictions implied by the jury's swift verdict that the Kansas City youth was sane at the time he kidnaped the Parker girl and sane at the time he killed her.

Hickman's attorneys cloistered themselves in their office today, co-ordinating argument for an appeal to the California supreme court.

While they did not specify on what grounds the appeal would be based, it was said that the customary routine objections, errors of the trial judge and the failure of the court to properly instruct the jury would form the argumentative groundwork with the possibility that the constitutionality of the law under which Hickman was convicted would be attacked.

Many Objections

During the trial both Walsh and his associate, Richard Cantillon of Los Angeles, entered numerous objections. Each of these, it was said, would find its way into the appeal.

In conformance with the instructions of the court, the jury, after less than 40 minutes of deliberation, brought in two verdicts: the first that Hickman was sane when he kidnaped Marion Parker and the second that he was sane when he murdered her.

BELIEVE PRISONERS HAVE SLAIN GUARDS

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 10.—Reports that two escaped prisoners had been seen without the two deputy sheriffs with whom they disappeared led to renewed fears today that the sheriff had been overcome and killed or disabled.

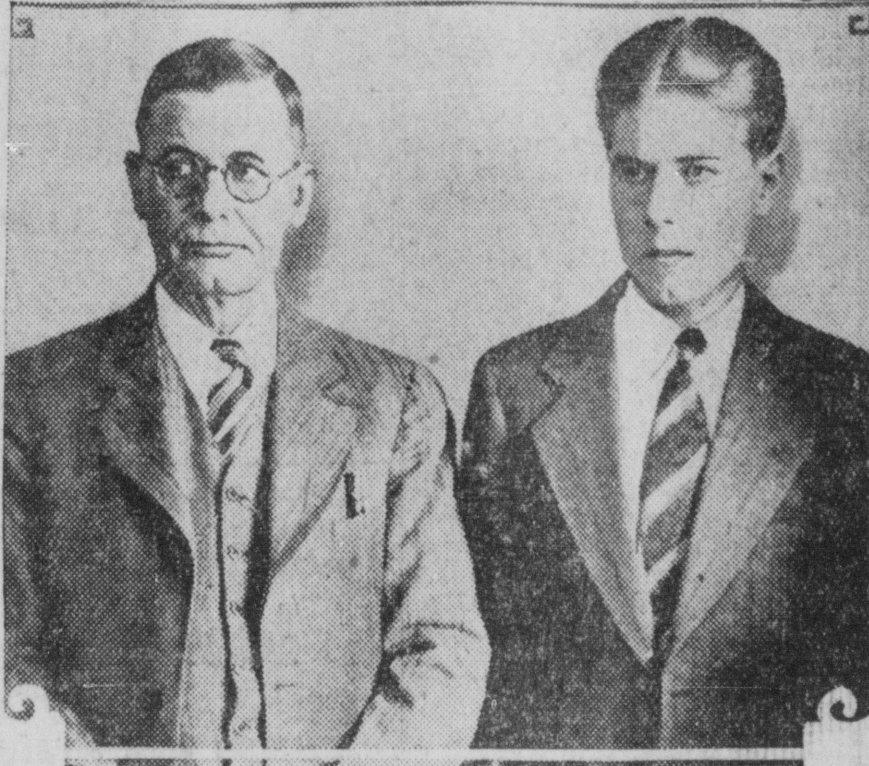

Discovery of a filed pair of handcuffs in South Chicago added to the indication that the prisoners had won their freedom.

The two prisoners were Samuel Baxter and John Burns, convicted of burglary. The deputies were John P. Grove and Wallace McClure, who left here with the prisoners Tuesday morning for the state reformatory at Pendleton, 70 miles away and had not been heard from since.

FARMER REPORTS THEFT OF HEIFER

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10.—(INS)—Frank Hudson, farmer, near Ashville, reported that a roan heifer calf weighing about 200 lbs., was stolen from his feed lot according to a police report here today. Tracks lead toward Columbus. His loss is estimated at $20.

Local Farmers and Sportsmen Form Protective Association

Promotion of Hunting and Fishing in Pickaway County Will Be Object of Organization—Game Refuge Will
Be Sought Here—Officers Elected.

Farmers and sportsmen from many parts of the county met at the Elks Home Thursday night and formed an organization known as the Pickaway County Farmers and Sportsmen's Protective Association. The purpose of the organization, composed of outdoorsmen, is to re-stock suitable territory with pheasants and game birds, raccoons, and other game from the state game farms and to re-stock waters free from pollution with game-fish from the state fish hatcheries, and to oppose stream pollution.

The organization will also promote friendly co-operation between farmers and sportsmen, co-operate in fish and game law enforcement, use its influence to prevent malicious destruction of property by hunters or fisherman, and to prevent trespassing without permission. An effort will be made to secure a state game refuge in the county and also to have the fish and game department at Columbus repair and use the old canal bed as a fish hatchery and as public fishing waters, also.

Application for a consignment of fish will be filed with state authorities at Columbus at once, and a delegation of farmers and sportsmen will go to Columbus to consult with the chief of the fish and game department on securing the proposed hatchery.

Stuber Speaks

J. W. Stuber, secretary of the League of Ohio Sportsmen of Columbus assisted in organizing the association, and told of the splendid results accomplished through co-operation of farmers and sportsmen in other counties.

"Wherever there is an organization of this kind there is more hunting and fishing, for everybody," Stuber said, "Some of the organizations have as many as 2,000 members," he stated. Stuber game and more fish and better called attention to the need of conservation of fish, game, and wild life, in order that sports with rod, gun and dog may be perpetuated.

"We need the out of doors in which to grow red-blooded courageous Americans; a rugged type of men like our pioneer grandfathers," he said. "There is no greater incentive to take men and women to the out of doors for hardy and healthful recreations than good hunting or good fishing. You never saw a parlor shiek in your life who was a hunter or fisherman or an outdoorsman. Nothing but the rugged kind of outdoor recreation will build rugged men. Ping-pong, tennis or bridge, won't do it. Golf won't do it."

Athlete Weighed

He told of one of the greatest football players of all time, fagged out and wearied the second day out on a wilderness trail in Canada, last year, when going in on a fishing trip, and how a 16 year old Indian boy took the athlete's pack and ran on across the trail with it. His college athletics were not sufficient for the rugged life of the

YOUNG BURGLARS ARRESTED HERE

Two youthful burglars, one seven years old and the other six years old, were captured Thursday by Officer William McCrady after they had entered the residence of Emanuel Stout at Court and York streets. It is said the visit was their third to the house and their loot consisted of a pair of spectacles. They were brought before Judge Joseph Adkins, who paroled them into the custody of their parents, pending a further investigation of their case.

CIRCLEVILLE YOUTH IS HELD ILLEGALLY IN PENITENTIARY

Harold Bowsher, an 18-year-old native of Circleville, has been such a problem for Kansas authorities that his release from further punishment for murder is believed likely.

Three and a half years ago, Bowsher ran away from Circleville, presumably "to see the world." Reaching Barton county, Kansas, he is said to have engaged in a fist fight with a "touring companion" on the Santa Fe railroad's right-of-way.

Bowsher, it is claimed, hit his friend, knocking him directly in the path of an approaching train. The boy was run over and killed.

A jury in the Kansas county decided Bowsher had knocked the other lad in front of the train purposely.

The Kansas authorities have inherited a problem that was once that of the officers of Pickaway county.

Bowsher was deserted when his parents separated. The father is said to be now living in Uricksville, O., and the mother in Benton Harbor, Mich.

The lad first gained prominence when he was sent to the Lancaster reform school by Judge E. A. Brown. He was later paroled, but Judge Joseph Adkins placed him in the care of the state welfare department for the correction of physical infirmities. Bowsher would run away periodically and at the request of the welfare department Judge Adkins sent him back to Lancaster.

Later, he was again paroled with the understanding that he would go to work. He returned to Circleville to live with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Clark, but two weeks later he ran away and was next heard of when he was arrested in Kansas.

Today the Kansas state penitentiary, holds Bowsher at Lansing, Kan., without legal right.

Originally sentenced to a state industrial school, the Circleville youth caused officials of the school so much trouble that he was transferred to the state reformatory.

From the latter institution, he was brought to the penitentiary here, without even the formality

BELIEVE GRAVE HOLDS BODY OF SLAIN WOMAN

New Philadelphia Authorities
Fail to Find Corpse in Tuscarawas River.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Feb. 10.—(UP)—Searchers continued dragging the Tuscarawas river and were beating through the underbrush along the Dover-Canton highway today, hoping to find the body of 23-year-old Viola May.

Police meanwhile, became more convinced hourly that the girl's brother-in-law, William D. Herron who confessed he choked her to death, did not drop the body into the Tuscarawas, but probably buried it in a shallow grave.

Sheriff Abe Laird advanced the theory Herron had hacked the body to pieces and buried it in a shallow grave. Two axes were found in Herron's abandoned automobile and later a piece of bloody clothing, believed Miss May's was discovered near a gravel pit. Laird said, however, that the axes bore no blood stains.

Place Fences in River

It was at the gravel pit that Herron first attacked the girl, after they and one of Miss May's girl friends, left Herron's house where the girls visited Miss May's sister. The girl friend was left at her home and Herron drove to the gravel pit and parked.

Miss May resisted his advances, he said, and he "choked her too long." Herron said he dropped the body into the Tuscarawas from a bridge at Dover.

Fences were stretched across the river below the bridge today, officials hoping that Miss May's body, if it were thrown into the river, would be caught as it washed down stream. Scores of searchers, augmenting city and county police, continued meanwhile to search the gravel pit and beat about the underbrush in the belief that the body was buried or hidden.

Reward Offered

The New Philadelphia Times today had offered a $100 reward for recovery of the body. The Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies were to meet and were expected to increase the offer. The prospect of reward spurred the searchers and it was believed the girl's body would be found by night.

The state, meanwhile, was powerless to file charges against Herron who has made two attempts at suicide since his arrest. In the absence of the body, authorities had only Herron's story to go on.

MURDER OF CHILD FOILED BY FATHER

BATTLE CREEK, MICH., Feb. 10.—(UP)—Intensive search was made today for a youth who kidnaped five-year-old Helen Gillett and was preparing, apparently, to murder her with a butcher knife when discovered by her father.

The manhunt started when Walton, local factory worker reported to police that Lester Daniels, 21, seized his daughter while she was at play and took her to a shack where he held her prisoner.

Water Company Seeks To Issue Bonds To Buy Circleville Plant

Marysville and Washington C. H. Properties Are Also Involved in Application Made By Service Firm of Ohio Utilities Commission.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10.—(INS)—The Ohio Water Service company, formerly The Massillon Water Supply company, today applied to the state utilities commission for permission to issue and sell 10,155 shares of its no-par common stock, $500,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock and $1,500,000 in 5 per cent bonds for the purpose of refunding certain outstanding securities and to purchase the properties of The Marysville Water company and the Circleville and Washington C. H. plants of The Water Service Corporation.

The Ohio Water company proposed to issue $1,150,000 in 5 per cent bonds, $40,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock, and 2,292 shares of its no-par common, at $10 per share, in payment for The Marysville Water company's properties, and to issue $500,000 in 5 per cent bonds, $140,000 in 6 per cent preferred and 2,863 shares of no-par common at $10 per share, in payment for the Circleville and Washington C. H. plants.

The commission, also, was asked to authorize the Ohio Water Service company to issue $30,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock and 5,000 shares of no-par common, at $10 per share, in exchange for outstanding securities consisting of $800,000 in 5½ per cent bonds and $350,000 in common stock and to sell $850,000 in 5 per cent bonds and $200,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock, at par, and 997 shares of common at $10 per share proceeds to be used in reimbursing its treasury for uncanceled capital expenditures.

SINGERS TO GIVE CONCERT TONIGHT

Mrs. Louise Malone Braxton, founder of the colored girls' school at Fulton, Ky., who with four other girls sang at the high school Friday morning, will sing at the Colored Baptist church Friday evening at 8 o'clock. She is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama.

Through her music and other efforts she has founded colored schools at Hayneville and Tysonville in Alabama, Yazoo City in Mississippi and in Bellevue, a suburb of Macon, Georgia. She is now raising funds for a dormitory, and a free-will offering will be taken, but there will be no admission.

This troupe sang spirituals, the most popular of songs at this time, Thursday night at the Presbyterian church in Kingston where they received a check for $45 from a friend. They sang eight times in Chillicothe last week, and received a large response. They will sing in the Circleville Presbyterian church on Sunday and will return to Chillicothe Monday to sing at the Elks home.

COMRADES OF VICTIM ACCUSE THEIR EX-BOSS

Details of Shooting Given By
tinue Next Week.

Details of the slaying of John Henry Hill, colored, in a camp at the crossing of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad south of Circleville on Nov. 14, 1927, for which James Flint, alias Walter Brown, also colored, is on trial for his life, were told to the jury in the Pickaway county common pleas court room Thursday afternoon and Friday morning.

Flint was accused and identified by two witnesses as the man who fired the two shots which claimed the life of Hill. These witnesses, who have been held in the county jail since the shooting, are Earl Mallett and Willie Jones, both colored, over whom Flint was formerly foreman in the Chesapeake and Hocking railroad construction.

Another reputed eye witness to the slaying Wade "Big Ease" Bivens was scheduled to take the stand Friday afternoon as the last witness for the state on direct testimony. There will be no court Saturday and it is now predicted that the case will not reach the jury until Tuesday and possibly Wednesday.

Identifies Flint

Thursday afternoon Earl Mallett positively identified Flint as the man who arrived at the camp south of Circleville five or ten minutes after Mallett's arrival there. Mallett said Flint asked for Hill and approached him at the camp fire. Mallett testified that he heard the sound of a blow and saw Hill rise to one knee. Then the fatal shots were fired.

After fleeing from the scene, Mallett said he returned and saw nothing of Flint but heard Hill moan: "Lord have mercy on me." Mallett then told how he went to John Morgan's house and reported the shooting, saying that someone there telephoned to the sheriff's residence.

On cross examination by the defense attorneys, Mallett said that he had taken one drink that afternoon, but denied that he was or had been intoxicated that day.

Davis Testifies

Other witnesses who testified Thursday afternoon were Sheriff Davis, who said that when Mallett told him of the shooting, he could smell liquor on the man's breath, but declared he was not intoxicated. He said that "Jungle," on the jail books as Frank Kellogg, the colored man who was at the camp fire when the sheriff arrived at the scene of the shooting, was searched by Deputy John Ward who found only a rock in the man's pocket.

Deputy John Ward corroborated the statements of Sheriff Davis and told how he made a close search of the home of Charles Bryd, where Flint was arrested, and how he failed to find a weapon there.

Dr. O. H. Dunton, county coroner, was recalled, and showed the breast of Hill's shirt, revealing the bullet holes. The portion of the shirt was introduced as state evidence as had been the survey of the scene, anatomical chart and the two bullets taken from Hill's body. Dr. Dunton testified that following his inquest he had ordered

French Houses Pretty but Not Comfortable

Have you ever—but of course you have—raced down in a too swift train from Cherbourg to Paris, through the French countryside on a spring afternoon when all the apple trees in Normandy are in full bloom? And through the trees you catch a glimpse of little old farmhouses that have stood there in the midst of their flowering orchards for centuries? Enchanting, these little houses; but according to modern standards hardly comfortable, says Arts and Decorations. Once inside, we should find the rooms too small and crowded; the windows too small to admit of proper ventilation; the kitchen antiquated, and the work done there made doubly difficult because of lack of equipment. No, these little houses are lovely to look at; on a walking trip, if night came on too quickly, one might enjoy staying over night, perhaps, sharing a French supper with the farmer's household, en famille, gathered about the kitchen table; sitting in one of the little rooms under the thatched roof, listening to the sleeping chirp of birds in the long soft twilight. But to live in one of these houses—impossible. It remains for our own young country to combine much of the charm of these old Normandy farmhouses with Twentieth century comfort.

Device Said to Be Superior to X-Ray

Dr. Andre Tours, a Frenchman, has discovered a means of making the human body transparent, so that all the organs will be seen working as in a mirror. The doctor has refused all financial assistance, and also an offer to go to the United States. He is determined that the first data shall be given to medical men of France.

If flesh can be made transparent so that the bones can be seen clearly by x-rays and osteopaths, X-rays will be dispensed with in locating internal troubles. The doctor in future will be able to see the trouble at once without diagnosing blindly. In cases of consumption and cancer the transparency of flesh will be an enormous boon to medical men.

Doctor Tours claims that his discovery will assist experts in tracing the cause of death where murder is suspected. "The presence of poison will be easily detected, and in the case of shooting the exact course of a bullet will be traced."

Explained

The newly appointed pastor of a negro church faced a packed audience when he arose to deliver a sermon on the burning question: "Is There a Hell?" "Bredren," he said, "de Lord made de world round like a ball." "Amen!" agreed the congregation. "And de Lord made two axles for de world to go round on, one axle at de North pole and one axle at de South pole." "And de Lord put a lot of oil and grease in de center of de world, so as to keep de axles well greased and oiled." "Amen!" said the congregation. "And then a lot of sinners dug wells in Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Mexico and Russia, and steal de Lord's oil and grease." "And some day dey will have all of de Lord's oil and grease, and dem axles is gonna get hot. And den, dat will be hell, bredren, dat will be hell."—Prairie Farmer.

Former Employers Of Dead Jockey Remember His Early Activities In Pickaway And Ross Counties

The death of Thomas Freal, 63, at Columbus, has brought many stories of the fame which he once enjoyed as a crack race-horse trainer and jockey, but none are so interesting as the reminiscences of James Shook and Peter White Brown, two Chillicotheans for whom Freal was up on his horse, 80's and 90's.

Freal was a native of Pickaway county. When just a youngster, he took to the race tracks as a means of finding a livelihood. He became an expert trainer and a wonderful jockey. Any owner was satisfied when Freal was up on his horse, because the owner knew that the horse would get good handling and a good ride.

From local fame, Freal stepped into larger fields. He rode on every important track in the United States and in Canada. Later he went to Europe and his ability as a steeple-chaser rider won him the fullest measure of fame. Kings, queens and others members of nobility were thrilled by his performances and lauded his efforts. Freal rode many races in Mexico and Australia. When he returned to the United States he had accumulated weight and lost his jockey standing. He began playing the races. Repeated losses dwindled down the comfortable fortune he had accumulated.

Conversing on Freal's riding in Ross county, Messrs. Brown and Shook recall that he rode at many of the county fairs and circuit races after the early 70's. Freal's first attempt at riding was at Commercial Point, Mr. Brown states. A gray mare was racing on the Commercial Point track, but had established a reputation for being unruly at the barrier. It was her habit to throw her rider before the race started. Many a jockey would take one fall and then refuse to ride the gray mare, says Mr. Brown.

Freal, who was a lover of horses and knew how to handle them, heard of the gray mare. She was to be raced on a certain day, and Freal walked from his home, which was in the vicinity of Amanda, to Commercial Point. Freal stated to his friends that the gray mare would throw her regular "jock" and that he might get a chance to ride her. The mare did just as Freal had prophesied. The jockey refused to take chances on a second fall. Freal offered to substitute and was soon clad in the silks of a jockey for the first time in his life. He rode the mare successfully and won the race, Mr. Brown recalls.

After the Commercial Point race, Mike Miller, South Bloomfield, brought Freal down to the D. Jerry Crouse stables, near Kinnikinnick. Crouse hired the under-sized, red-haired Irish youngster to work in the stables and as a rider.

In 1880 or shortly after, Freal was riding for Mr. Brown. He rode Contest and Ohio Boy, two famous Brown horses, at county fairs and on Latonia, Detroit and Windsor tracks. Freal's last appearance as

Etiquette of Divorce and Remarriage Has Fine Points

WIFE AND EX-WIFE
AS BOSOM FRIENDS

Winifred Black Finds It Hard to Reconcile These Grotesque Intimacies Which Sometimes Follow Divorce

By WINIFRED BLACK

It is indecent to be friendly with the man you married and divorced—when he's married to another woman. Well, my dear, really, there are so many "ifs" and "ands" about an affair like this, you shouldn't expect an up and down "yes" or "no" answer to such a question as that.

I crossed the ocean with a woman once. She was a nice woman, sweet and gentle, and unusually clever. She came of an old New England family with a name that is known wherever the New England aristocracy is known.

She was traveling with her husband and her little daughter, and one day when I spoke about the little daughter she said: "She isn't my daughter, she's the daughter of the first Mrs. So and So."

"You know Lottie, don't you? Charming woman, isn't she? She and Harry couldn't get on at all and so she divorced Harry and I married him. I'm awfully fond of Lottie. She's coming to the pier to meet us. She's still fond of Harry and he's fond of her, but they just can't live together, that's all."

All the rest of the voyage over I kept looking at the wife and stepmother, and wondering whether she was really telling me the real truth about the whole strange affair.

When we landed in New York, there she was on the pier—the first wife—smiling and delighted. From the pier she went home with the man and his wife and her own child, and spent two weeks with them in their little apartment up on the Drive.

I knew both women and I liked them both and liked the husband, too, for that matter. The little girl I liked, too, but most of all I pitied her. What sort of a twisted idea of life and love and marriage she must have! I've often wondered since then what became of her. Did she marry and divorce her husband and marry again and divorce the second husband and marry again? Maybe she went into a convent and became a nun. What do you suppose?

I know two women who married the same man and after the first one divorced her husband and he married the second one, she managed it so that she never saw anything of the second wife at all. She was not angry with her. She had no reason to be. Her husband never heard of the second wife until the first wife divorced him. But somehow she felt that it was rather like—oh, I don't know, wearing somebody else's clothes or borrowing some exceedingly intimate garment. But when the man died and each of the two women married again, they became good friends.

Why not? But while he was living, well, my dear, it may be all right—but somehow it isn't quite what you might call "sensitive," is it, to keep up such a friendship? Do you think so, really?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of 18 and am very deeply in love with a fellow two years my senior. I think he loves another girl. Please advise me how I can win his love.

ANXIOUS: I must caution you against attempting to take the initiative in a matter of this sort, my dear, and advise you to let the boy do his own choosing. If you are a congenial, attractive and interesting companion I am sure he will be responsive to your charms and may, in time, prefer you to this other girl. It would be most inadvisable for you to reveal your attitude to him in any way but, if you are subtle and tactful, I am sure you will be able to win this boy's admiration if you make yourself charming and prove a desirable companion.

Daytime Frocks Are Notable for Smart Lines and Effective Materials.

By Marie Marot

It is not hard to discover the reason for the survival of tailored lines, in spite of the femininity, for in no other way can the ease and grace of the slim silhouette in daytime and sports frocks be achieved, as with the simplicity of masculine lines. These, however, have none of the severity that was notable in past seasons. Novel fabrics are used to give a distinctly feminine effect and lines are broken to relieve any suggestion of harshness. Necklines and waistslines vary according to the individual, and plaits, godets and circular flares all have their place in this versatile mode.

The daytime costume really is the most important in the average woman's wardrobe and to this the greatest consideration should be given. It is essential that such costumes avoid a tiresome similarity while any suggestion of the pretentious is, of course, bad taste. There is a happy medium, but in seeking it, care should be taken to avoid monotony of design.

There is a decided contrast in the two costumes shown here. They might be worn successfully for any outdoor daytime occasion at the Southern resorts.

One has the long tunic that has been so popular all season. It is slightly bloused and the buttons on the surplus line of the front relieve the severity. The applied bands on the wide hem and sleeves are of a darker material that also makes the skirt.

The slim silhouette is emphasized by the straight one-piece frock of crepe de Chine that is worn with a jacket of flannel with a collar that is distinctly military in effect.

Bossing the Job Is an Art in Itself

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

YOU may call yourself an employer if you have a directing influence in the organization of which you are the head or a part.

And if you do not already possess such a directing influence you are undoubtedly striving to do so some day.

There are few men who do not want to be on top. Every man desires to be a boss. Occasionally one finds an individual who prefers working for someone else so as to be relieved of all responsibility.

This is not, however, natural to the male sex. Men who have no ambitions to boss others around are often neurotic. The so-called "inferiority complex" has got them.

To be a progressive employer is, not as easy as it looks and it is well to examine yourself to find out whether you are ready to be an employer or, if you are an employer already, if you are as progressive as you might be.

An employer's first concern, of course, is to find the best possible worker or workers for the job in hand. Next he must try to find the best possible methods, the most improved ways of doing things, the latest in everything that applies to the work in question. That is the way to get the best results.

All results are what count.

All these essentials are not sufficient, though, if the employer has not learned to get the best out of himself. The character of the boss is invariably shown in the character of the office, store, or factory.

The carelessness of an employer

Water of Great Importance to Beauty

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

SUFFICIENT water is essential to beauty because it is an essential to health and life. Without water we would die within a few days. With water we can live on for many days without additional nourishment.

Water not only forms a large percentage of all the vital juices of the body such as the blood, saliva and digestive secretions but it is the medium through which the poisons that continually are forming in the system are thrown off. Consequently we need water, and then more water, until at least eight glasses have been drunk each day for that is the approximate amount of water exuded through the lungs, kidneys and skin each day. If a lesser amount of water is taken into the system than is thrown off you can see how a process of drying up begins throughout the body just the same as fruitful earth becomes barren from lack of rain.

Insufficient water brings about a process of slow poisoning that is just as fatal as a drop of some deadly, brining drug added to one's daily food, for when water is denied, the toxins which form in the body make the blood impure and stifle and clog the excretory system until all sorts of dire physical problems arise.

As I said before at least eight glasses of water should be drunk each day to adequately purge the elimination tract. It is amazing how many cases of skin eruptions find their assumed superiority for fear of being found out. The genuinely strong and dominant personality is, generally speaking, unobtrusive in manners and appearance. Such a virtue being also has a wholesome respect and deference for the feelings and wishes of others.

Although he may possess a just and dispassionate estimate of his own worth and achievements, he has also gauged his own limitations and has made an inventory of his strong and weak points.

Common sense and experience have taught the really superior man the folly of sham and pretense, the absurdity of hiding behind conceit in order to impress his associates. Nowadays people are not easily fooled. In fact, their natural suspiciousness keeps them constantly on the alert.

The job of employer is not such an easy one, after all, if you really want to be progressive.

In this you owe a lot to others as well as to yourself.

WHY DODGE EFFORTS TO INSURE HEALTH?

Dr. Copeland Has a Word to Say to Those Who Know the Rules of Hygiene But Won't Practise Them.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

"If is a little word with a big meaning." So said a small boy to me the other day. We were talking about the strong bodies we might have if we were to do certain things. Then it was he commented in the words I have quoted.

"If" is indeed a word big with meaning and importance. What wonders we could accomplish if—! What vigorous health we would have if—!

The truth is that the average individual knows more about how to live than he admits even to himself. Certainly he knows more than he admits to his friends.

If this is true, and I believe it is, the average person could have better health and be more useful if he would live up to the knowledge of the things necessary to do in order to have perfect health. In short, he would be better off if he did his full duty to himself.

Too much of our time is spent in making excuses. A friend of mine says he never admits or denies anything. I am not quite sure about the morals of this mental attitude, but I declare I would rather put up with the mistakes some of my friends make than to listen to their excuses for what they have done.

If you were to go to bed an hour earlier than you usually do, and make it a practice to get up an hour earlier than you do now, you could spend that hour profitably by exercise in the open air before you sit down to breakfast.

Even though you know it is a good thing to do, it requires effort, and you are not willing to make the effort. If you would do it, your health would be better and your chance of disease would be lessened.

Life would be increased, but that "little word with a big meaning" stands in the way of a sensible undertaking.

If you would eat a little bit less of the things you know are not good for you, and a little more of the things that will improve your bodily nature every day, you would increase your chance of long life. It requires self-control and sacrifice to do this, and you are unwilling to make the sacrifice. The "little word with a big meaning" stands in the way of your welfare.

How easy it is to drift along with the current of life, taking things as they come. We are unwilling to make the effort necessary to arrest the current and to insure our landing in a safer harbor. If we were willing to fight against these inclinations which tend in the direction of the bad, we would be better off in every respect. But the "little word with a big meaning" interferes.

If you don't do anything else to improve your physical welfare, I beg of you to give regard to the simple rules of hygiene. You need not buy expensive apparatus or visit a gymnasium every day. You need not join an expensive golf club or ride a spirited horse. But if you will cultivate those simple habits which everybody knows are conducive to good health and long life, you will have the strength and vigor to make your career a more useful one.

Answers to Health Queries

A. L. Q.—Does the bending exercise tend to reduce the waist line?

A.—Yes.

M. T. Q.—Would you consider it harmful to eat only soured milk and coarse bread for two or three weeks in order to reduce weight?

A.—I am 20 years of age, 5 ft. 10 in. tall, what should I weigh?

A.—How much should a girl aged 6, 4 ft. 2 inches tall weigh, also a girl aged 9, 4 ft. 7 inches tall?

A.—Yes. Eat sparingly of starches, sugars and fats. Exercise daily. A gradual reduction in the amount of food consumed, with regular exercise will work wonders in most cases.

2.—Should weigh about 150 pounds.

3.—They should weigh respectively about 53 and 72 pounds.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

The Queer Little Plant with Ten Little Pockets.

WHEN Willy Bee discovered the stranger blooming beside the mountain-side he stopped to chat.

"Well, well, Stranger, welcome to these meadows," Willy Bee buzzed merrily. "I hope you will like our friendly here."

"Thank you, Willy Bee," laughed the lovely blossom lady. "This much of leaves on the ground here is just the kind of stuff I like to grow in. I'm Mrs. Laurel. Some folks call me Calico Bush because my blossoms look so much like a goods they have called calico. Folks in Europe call me Kalmia. I don't know just why. What in the world is that you have on your legs there?"

"Why, my pockets are so full of pollen they are running over," laughed Willy Bee. "Sometimes I think it's unwise to have pockets in one's legs. You can't carry enough pollen in them. Guess that's one thing you plants don't have to worry about. You haven't any pockets."

"Is that so?" laughed the Stranger. "Well, I see you don't know much about us Laurel Blossoms. Why, Willy Bee, I have ten little pockets in every leaf. You see on my bush—ten little pockets, and every one filled with treasures. I was just wishing I could send some pollen to my relatives on the other side of this hill."

"I'll take it over for you myself," said Willy Bee. "I've never been so far away from the bee hive, but I know Mother won't care as long as I'm helping someone else. Will it be another plant just like you?"

"Just like me," replied Mrs. Laurel Plant. "Now come a wee bit closer to my blossom."

Willy Bee sailed down upon one of the pretty calico blossoms. His hind leg touched one of Mrs. Laurel's hair triggers. Bang, sounded in Willy Bee's ears. He sailed up quickly.

"What's the big idea?" he demanded, shaking all over. "Shooting me? I haven't done you any harm."

Mrs. Laurel Plant was laughing so hard she could hardly talk.

"Bee, I wasn't shooting you. Come here now and let me show you something."

Willy Bee hovered once more over the calico blossom.

"You just snapped one of the wee triggers that holds in my pollen," laughed Mrs. Laurel Plant. "You see I have ten little pockets in every leaf blossom, and these little pockets are filled with pollen. It only takes the slightest touch to release one of them. Your leg touched one of the hair triggers and my pollen gun sprinkled you with pollen."

"Sure enough, it did," buzzed Willy Bee merrily, glancing down at his suit covered with orange-colored pollen. "I'll take it right over to your cousin. May I come back again sometime, Mrs. Laurel Plant?"

"Indeed, you may any time," replied Mrs. Laurel, "and don't forget to tell your friend about the little plant with ten little pockets."

Willy promised not to forget, and spreading his wings, with a merry buzz, he sailed away to pay his respects to Mrs. Laurel on the other side of the mountain.

DAILY WORSHIP—I will extol thee, my God, O King; and I will bless thy name for ever and ever. Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.—Psalm 145:1.

Hitching Wagons to Stars.

A Florida man is laying plans for the construction of a giant rocket, in which he hopes to be shot from the earth to the planet Venus.

This is altogether a laudable ambition, even though reports thus far published fail to state just what he expects to do after he gets here or how he thinks he is going to get back. A great many of us, at one time or another, have wanted very much to go sailing off to a distant star.

Indeed, you might say that the yearning to do that is every man's heritage. This is especially true in youth. There are times, particularly when one is young and easily hurt, when the breaking of illusions is so painful that this earth seems rather a makeshift planet, at best, and the unattainable stars shine very invitingly.

This spirit too, is very valuable. It propels men in all manner of pursuits. It causes some to write poetry, to paint pictures, to compose music; it leads others into paths of industrial success, turning them into powerful men of money; it sends still others into public life, making senators, judges and presidents of them.

For no one ever rose far without first becoming dissatisfied with his surroundings. The desire to leap to the farthest star must, of necessity, remain ungratified, unless perchance the Florida man should find his rocket unexpectedly practical; but in his vain efforts to gratify his desires a man will, sometimes in spite of himself, do good service for himself and his times.

So perhaps it will be just as well if this big rocket proves a dud. If it should be perfected the earth would suffer too great an exodus. Not one of us but would, at some time or other, try his luck on another planet in preference to this one. But, lacking rockets, we stay here and do the best we can—and, unconsciously, make the earth a better place to live.

The Middle of the Road.

The middle of the road man is seldom popular. There is something in human nature which makes us dislike the person who refuses to take definite sides on any disputed question but insists that the proper course is about halfway between the two extremes.

This is unfortunate, for it often happens that the middle-of-the-road man is right.

Consider the Nicaraguan situation, for instance. One party insists that we have no right there at all; another party insists that we should go even further than we have gone and put Nicaragua squarely under the rule of the American flag forever.

We suggest that the truth must lie somewhere between these two extremes. The vast majority of Americans undoubtedly have benevolent feeling toward the Central American republics and want to see them remain free and independent; yet it is undeniably true that constant disturbances such as Nicaragua indulges in are unhealthy conditions for our own back yard.

The middle course! It's so unpopular; yet it's so often correct.

The Short Month.

The calendar reformers say it is wrong to have a short month like February, which usually consists of 28 days, though it is 29 in Leap year, while the rest of the months have 30 or 31. They want 13 months of 28 days each, with one extra day work in somewhere.

Then when that time comes, we shall not need calendars to remind us which are the short months and which the long ones, and we shall know each week on which day of the month a certain day of the week comes.

That will save expense for calendars, but as the same are used largely by advertisers, people will need to advertise in some different way.

The irregularity of the months may cause trifling annoyances, but the world suffers from greater troubles, so it does not worry much about this minor difficulty. February has never been one of the most popular months, so most people are not lamenting because it is a short one.

NOW SOON THE SPRING

NOW soon
The Spring
Will Come around
And happy flowers
Will dot
The ground,
And creeks will Trickle merrily
While
Birds sing songs
As cheerily;
While on a trek
To woods or Stream
The entire world will Happy seem,
For Spring brings
Sunshine
To your soul
And you seem Nearer
To your goal,
And thus Rejuvenated,
You
Will find each Patch of sky
True blue;
And so around
The corner,
Friend,
You'll find
Your Spring,
But it
Must end—

And what we mean to say
Is,
The spring of life
Comes 'round each day,
It's scattered
On
Life's right-of-way,
It's just the way
Your eyes disclose
The prickly thorn
Or scented rose;
No day's so
Dull
But what the sun
Will shine upon
A life well done;
And so let Spring come
All the year
It's really up
To you, I fear.

One of the sad features of reality, for the girls, at least, is the fact that no man ever looks quite as clean-cut as the Arrow collar ads would have you believe.

TODAY'S BEST STORY

A young minister at Kansas City, Kan., attended the theatre with his wife Saturday evening. After the show they saw a girl standing alone on the street. "She is waiting to make a date," said the young preacher to his wife, "and I'll bet I can pick her up." "All right," responded the wife, "you try and I'll watch." He tried, made the catch, and a policeman took them all into tow. The preacher and his wife were released on bail, and Sunday night he explained to his congregation that he considered it his duty to keep "such women" off the street. He is 26 years old. Perhaps public morals are improved by such exhibitions. Somehow, the idea back of it is elusive. Ministers may be concerned in "laboratory" material, but whether it is wise to get it in this way may be questioned. As an old chap out in western Nebraska used to say he knew a man once who piled up a fortune simply by attending to his own business. Maybe when this young preacher's congregation gets through with him he will realize what this old man meant.—Selected by SEE, from Omaha Bee.

When a Man Loves

By ALICE LOWE MILES

John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture
Adaptation of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Texout, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barters her to Ravoir, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoir. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. But Manon seeks him, explains, and they go to Paris again, where they live in dreamlike splendor.

"Oh, Lord!" ejaculated Fabien. "You will have to pardon me, my dear. I will return when I do not have to share you with so many." Fabien hurried to Manon's side and kissed her finger tips gallantly. "Wait!" she commanded gaily. "Help me up first." Fabien lifted her to the side of the great bed. "Thank you—no, don't go yet—my slippers next!" She extended bare, pink little feet and as Fabien lifted on her satin slippers she bent over and kissed him provokingly on the forehead. Turning away with a laugh, before he could imprison her hands, she began struggling into a filmy negligee. Fabien came to the rescue and wrapped her lovely figure in its fragrant folds.

"Now, my lady, will you descend?" he inquired with mock dignity, offering his hand. Manon touching it gently with her finger tips and with exaggerated grace stepped from the dais to the floor—like a queen descending from her throne.

"Darling, one kiss—" Manon stood on tiptoes with pursed lips. "—Yes—now you may go, but come back very soon!" She watched Fabien depart, then turning to the maid with a big happy sigh she said, "Marie, have them come in."

They came. A troupe of morning callers who sat about and chatted while the hairdressers prepared Manon for the festivities of the day.

The Abbe Martineau was a quaint little figure. Manon's beauty had inspired him to write verse and the first thing he did was to perch himself on the arm of a big chair, at one end of her dressing table, and indulge in the pleasure of reading aloud while her coiffure was being arranged before his very eyes. It was just intimate enough to please him immeasurably. Pauses in his reading were due not so much to emotion as to intervals in which he sipped wine and times when others intruded for a moment of Manon's time.

Manon was charming and attentive, with the result that the little man came every day and remained long enough to read a new couplet and imbibe a glass of wine.

The Abbe's presence, on this particular morning, annoyed Nana excessively. She did not have any perfume that compared with Manon's and the special bottle she wanted was on the corner of the dressing table where the Abbe interfered with her getting it. In the meantime she glowered at the little man and consoled herself by smelling the contents of every other bottle she could get her hands on. When she found a scent that she liked a generous portion was immediately transferred to her fingers and then brushed across her lips.

"Do you like that odor, Nana?" inquired Manon, who had been watching her with amusement. "Yes, it is most seductive—what do you call it?"

"It's yours, if you want it," replied Manon generously. "I couldn't think of it," protested Nana, but she had already decided.

Police Chiefs To Hold World Convention In Colorado Next Year

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 10.—(INS)—The annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs will be held here in the shadow of Pike's Peak, late in June this year. The "coppers" will discuss ways and means of preventing crime and catching criminals, beginning June 25, the sessions continuing through June 28.

Several hundred police chiefs from all over the world are expected to attend the convention.

ed to take the crystal and gold bottle as well as the rare perfume. "That is all right, Nana; Fabien will buy more—he gives me everything I want."

"Yes, I have noticed—I don't see how you manage it," drawled Nana with mingled admiration and envy. "I have never owned as much jewelry as you have discarded."

Manon knew that Nana referred to the Comte De Ravoir's gifts, and it was annoying to have that episode of her life revived. Besides she hated to have anyone think that Fabien had not done a great deal more for her.

Opening a dressing table drawer, Manon took out a handsome velvet case and offered it for Nana's inspection. A priceless diamond pendant glittered handsomely from the rich velvet box.

"Isn't it a darling?" she inquired proudly.

"It is more beautiful than the Comte's ruby necklace." Nana's admiration was sincere.

"Fabien brought it to me last night." Manon lifted the jewel from the box and slipped the delicate chain over her head.

The hairdressers had just completed their pleasant duty and Manon's callers gathered about to inspect her new gift.

She made a lovely picture, sitting there before her mirror, so happy in her love, with her lover's latest extravagant gift sparkling from its nesting place on her breast.

Unknown to everyone, Fabien was the most absorbed spectator of the little scene.

Since leaving Manon's boudoir he had wandered about the great house trying to settle upon some way to handle the pressing need for money. His father had disowned him. Tiberge was still friendly and compassionate, but his means were limited, and even if he gave up all he had it would not be sufficient to meet their extravagant mode of living. It did not occur to Fabien to live simply, because Manon's nature demanded luxuries and amusement and he felt that he should be man enough to provide them for her. Asals he loved her in the gay happy moods that were hers in the midst of their present surroundings and some way, some how, he was determined to provide all that her pleasure loving nature craved.

Fabien had not settled on any definite financial plan when he recalled Manon's request to "come back very soon." He returned to her boudoir and chanced to arrive at the open door just as she was showing her necklace. Fabien remained outside, a look of comic dismay on his worried face.

A few days before Manon had described the jewel to him with such enthusiasm that he could not resist surprising her with it as a gift. No one knew better than he how ill he could afford the indulgence. But when he saw what a beautiful picture she made in its reflected glory he did not regret the extravagance. The incident only drove home the fact that he must raise money—a quantity of money—before many more days passed into eternity and carried him along in a hopeless maze of bills and insistent bailiffs.

Fabien tried to put Manon out of his thoughts as he went down stairs to confront the two gentlemen. He knew only too well who they were and what they wanted. Their presence in his home was not welcome and he dreaded the consequences of the enforced interview.

CHAPTER XVI

When Fabien entered the drawing room he felt two pairs of piercing eyes centered upon him.

The humiliation and annoyance that had been his before entering the door changed to an air of amused nonchalance. The situation did have an amusing side. Why not play up to it and ignore the danger involved? At least it would be a new and refreshing way to receive the callers.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," Fabien bowed politely as though they were distinguished guests. "I had not expected to have the pleasure of receiving you again so soon!"

The two men plainly showed their surprise at this unexpected greeting and as a result the things they had intended saying came out in unintelligible sputters. One of them began searching his pockets for a paper that it was his duty to serve. Fabien saw the gesture and with an amused twinkle and deliberate misconstruction said:

"Won't you try some of mine?" offering his snuff box. "Perhaps you left yours at home."

"We didn't come here to take snuff with you—and you know it!" shouted the angry bailiff, at last finding his tongue.

A SLAVE TO HIS DUTY

CHAPTER XXIX.

On several more occasions it was necessary to fly by instrument for short periods; then the fog broke up into patches. These patches took on forms of every description. Numerous shore lines, appeared, with trees perfectly outlined against the horizon. In fact, the mirages were so natural that had I not been in mid-Atlantic and known that no land existed along my route, I would have taken them to be actual islands.

As the fog cleared I dropped down closer to the water, sometimes flying within ten feet of the

HOWE ABOUT?

By ED. W. HOWE

I lately met a rather noted character who was actually an old bum. He did not realize the importance of being a gentleman. His ideas were those of an old bum; he regarded eccentricity as genius and as sufficient excuse for his wasted life.

I do not like old bums in literature, politics, or anywhere else.

I expect men to realize their responsibilities, and meet them with some success.

The undoubted literary ability of Oscar Wilde did not excuse him for his disgusting habits.

When a man dies, people should at least be able to forget him, and not recall his immoral atrocities.

Collection of alimony has become a business, as has the collection of funds for welfare work. . . . And the collection of alimony has ruined many a useful business concern; as has welfare work. I know half a dozen business concerns that have been crippled by welfare work; by members of the firm engaging in it, in addition to giving too much, at the instigation of professionals. A business man who engages in welfare work not only causes his neighbors to hate him, and trade elsewhere, but he neglects his business.

A certain expert travels about to doctor sick business houses; he tells me the trouble almost invariably is bad management of sons and sons-in-laws, and the clamor of widows for incomes.

The country is full of business houses founded by hard-working and capable men. Now their concern are in charge of sons and sons-in-law who have had little training except in college, golf, tennis and society and widows demanding dividends.

I do not wish to fool any man; I want no follower who neglects his own duties to oblige me. All I hope to accomplish is to inspire men to take a little better care of their own selfish interests, and encourage me in taking care of mine.

I believe others admire them, but I do not care for broad-minded people. Everyone of that description has too much charity for evil-doers, and evil acts. The world should be considered not with a broad mind, but with a just, an exact and intelligent mind.

When you're having a good time, you are not accomplishing anything else, unless it is accumulating a bust head for next day.

waves and seldom higher than two hundred.

There is a cushion of air close to the ground or water through which a plane flies with less effort than when at a higher altitude, and for hours at a time I took advantage of this factor.

Also, it was less difficult to determine the wind drift near the water. During the entire flight the wind was strong enough to produce white caps in the waves. When one of these formed, the form would be blown off, showing the wind's direction and approximate velocity. This form remained on the water long enough for me to obtain a general idea of my drift.

During the day I saw a number of porpoises and a few birds, but no ships, although I understand that two different boats reported me passing over.

The first indication of my approach to the European coast was a small fishing boat which I first noticed a few miles ahead and slightly to the south of my course. There were several of these fishing boats grouped within a few miles of each other.

I flew over the first boat without seeing any signs of life. As I circled over the second, however, a man's face appeared, looking out of the cabin window.

I have carried on short conversations with people on the ground by flying low, with throttled engine, shouting a question and receiving the answer by some signal.

When I saw this fisherman I decided to try to get him to point towards land. I had no sooner made the decision than the futility of the effort became apparent.

In all likelihood he could not speak English, and even if he could he would undoubtedly be far too astounded to answer. However, I circled again and closing the throttle as the plane passed within a few feet of the boat I shouted:

"Which way is Ireland?"

Of course the attempt was useless, and I continued on my course.

Less than an hour later a rugged and semi-mountainous coastline appeared to the northeast. I was flying less than two hundred feet from the water when I sighted it. The shore was fairly distinct and not over ten or fifteen miles away. A light haze, coupled with numerous local storm areas,

had prevented my seeing it from a long distance.

The coastline came down from the north, curved over towards the east. I had very little doubt that it was the southwestern end of Ireland, but in order to make sure I changed my course toward the nearest point of land.

I located Cape Valentia and Dingle Bay, then resumed my compass course towards Paris.

After leaving Ireland I passed a number of steamers and was seldom out of sight of a ship.

In a little over two hours the coast of England appeared. My course passed over Southern England and a little south of Plymouth; then across the English Channel, striking France over Cherbourg.

The English farms were very impressive from the air in contrast to ours in America. They appeared extremely small and unusually neat and tidy with their stone and hedge fences.

I was flying at about a fifteen hundred foot altitude over England and as I crossed the Channel and passed over Cherbourg, France, I had probably seen more of that part of Europe than many native Europeans. The visibility was good and the country could be seen for miles around.

People who have taken their first flight often remark that no one knows what the locality he lives in is like until he has seen it from above. Countries take on different characteristics from the air.

The sun went down shortly after passing Cherbourg and soon the beacons along the Paris-London airway became visible.

I first saw the lights of Paris a little before ten p. m., or five p. m. New York time and a few minutes later I was circling the Eiffel Tower at an altitude of about four thousand feet.

The lights of Le Bourget were plainly visible, but appeared to be very close to Paris. I had understood that the field was farther from the city, so continued out to the northeast into the country for four or five miles to make sure that there was not another field father out which might be Le Bourget.

Then I returned and spiraled down closer to the lights. Presently I could make out long lines of hangars, and the roads appeared to be jammed with cars.

I flew low over the field once, then circled around into the wind and landed.

After the plane stopped rolling I turned it around and started to taxi back to its lights. The entire field ahead, however, was covered with thousands of people all running towards my ship.

MISS ALLISON DELAPLAINE, SOCIETY EDITOR

Women's Club Meets

At the meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Thursday night, the speaker of the evening was Dr. Howard Jones. A paper, "The American Indian," on which subject, Dr. Jones is an authority, was given, at the request of the club.

It was entertaining, enlightening and instructive, and every member who had the privilege of hearing it, went away with an entirely new conception of the only real Americans.

The club feels that it owes a vote of sincere thanks to Dr. Jones for a profitable and well-spent evening.

Plan Meeting

The Parent-Teachers meeting of the Pickaway County School will occur on Thursday, Feb. 16, at 6:30 o'clock at the school house. The social hour will begin with a basket lunch, which is to be followed by an interesting program.

Song by all, "America the Beautiful"; devotion by the Rev. F. S. Webb; a musical trio, by Mrs. Ralph Boggs, Miss Mary Radcliff and Miss Ruth McKenzie; a talk on "Founder's Day," by Mrs. Bernard Young; vocal solo, by Mrs. Cliff Metler; talk on "Health," by Mrs. E. E. Brownell, County Nurse; reading by Mrs. D. E. Dresbach; and a selection by the musical trio, Mrs. Boggs, Miss Radcliff and Miss Ruth McKenzie.

Concert in Columbus

Those from Circleville who heard Paderewski in Columbus Thursday night, report that the concert has never been equaled in that city. More than 4200 persons were crowded into the Memorial hall, and their applause kept the artist at the piano for three hours of pianism, which is unprecedented in Columbus for this form of entertainment.

One party who attended from Circleville consisted of Mrs. S. T. Ruggles, Mrs. John Bennett, Mrs. Evan Reichelderfer, Miss Abbe Clarke, Miss Miriam Ruggles and Miss Martha Moore.

Shower for Bride

Miss Helen Dumm, who has just recently announced her marriage to Mr. Leslie Rihl, which was solemnized at Greenup, Ky., on April 23, 1927, by Rev. Naps, was very pleasantly surprised by the operators of the Citizens Telephone Co., with a kitchen shower, Thursday evening at her home, 121 Pleasant street. A very delicious three course lunch was served. During the evening, social conversation and music were enjoyed by the following, who helped to make the affair a real success, Gertrude Steele, Margaret Mavis, Mary Howard, Gertrude Huffman, Susie Blaney, Beatrice Hanley, Anna Ryan, Lillian Wagner, Ethel Dewitt, Anna Pursell, Ida Malone, Josephine Stout, Margaret Shadley, Edith Willis, Kathryn Imler. Many beautiful and useful gifts were received by the bride. Mrs. Rihl is employed by the Citizens Telephone Co., and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vause Dumm, of Jackson township. Mr. Rihl is employed as conductor on the Scioto Valley Traction lines, and is the son of Mrs. Rose Rihl, of this city.

Have Noon and Evening Parties

There were thirty-two guests at both the lucheon bridge and the dinner bridge on Thursday at which Mrs. D. E. Mason and Mrs. W. F. Heffner were hostesses. The small tables were decorated for lucheon and dinner, with baskets of sweet peas in pastel shades, and the prize at noon for the high bridge score was won by Mrs. J.

W. Baldwin, and at night by Mrs. Christian Schwarz. Mrs. Metzner from Detroit, and Mrs. Charles Van Meter, of Paducah, Kentucky, were the guests from out of town.

Play "500" and Bridge

Mrs. O. L. Cartright and Mrs. Charles Owens entertained Thursday evening with two tables of bridge and two of five hundred at the home of the former in South Court Street.

Have All Day Meeting

The Women's Day at the Methodist Church, which is held the 2nd Thursday in each month, was considered a splendid success, Thursday. On this day the Foreign Missionary, and Home Missionary societies, and the Ladies' Aid, have an all day meeting, which gives the members an opportunity to get together.

The meeting began with the Home Missionary business session and program, at which time a chapter in the book, "The Adventure of the Church," was read by Mrs. Harry Griner. Mrs. Charles Rife had charge of the devotionals, and Mrs. Mack Noggle and Mrs. J. O. Eagleson sang a duet.

At noon the ladies aid served lunch to all the members present, and to the public. This was followed by the business session of this society in the parlors of the church at 1:00 o'clock.

The foreign Missionary Society meeting began at 2:00 o'clock. Here Mrs. Jay Wall gave a study talk and Mrs. George Fitzpatrick read an interesting paper. Other numbers were solos by Mrs. J. O. Eagleson and Mrs. Mack Noggle.

Honor Mr. and Mrs. Barnes

Mr. and Mrs. Rom Barnes, of South Pickaway street, entertained with a six o'clock dinner party on Thursday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Barnes, of Terra Haute, Indiana, who have been visiting relatives in Circleville.

At Lutheran Church

The meeting of the Ladies' Society of the Lutheran Church, Thursday afternoon, was opened by the Rev. G. J. Troutman, who read scripture and offered an opening prayer. These were followed by Mrs. Uri Reigel's missionary paper "Climbing the Ladder with Mother on Guard." COUNTY BASKETBALL TOURNEY STARTS FEB. 17

SCHEDULE IS ARRANGED BY PROF. WARREN

Competition Will Be Held at C. A. C. Gym—Finals to Be Played Feb. 25.

The complete schedule for the annual basketball tournament of Pickaway county, which will be held in the C. A. C. gym at Circleville on Feb. 17 and 18, and on Feb. 23, 24 and 25, was announced Friday by Prof. M. C. Warren, superintendent of the county schools.

Last year the tournament was won by the New Holland boys and by the Monroe girls. Both schools have good teams this year and hope to repeat, but they will find their ambitions anything but easy to achieve as a number of the other schools have strong floor squads this season.

On Friday night, Feb. 17, beginning at 7 o'clock, the Washington and Scioto boys will clash in the opening fray, after which the Ashville and Darby boys will compete. Other games that night will be between Saltcreek and Walnut girls and between the Deercreek and Jackson girls.

Continue Feb. 18
The first round eliminations will continue on Saturday, Feb. 18, beginning at 9 o'clock. The boys' games will be between Muhlenberg and Walnut, and between Deercreek and Monroe. The Muhlenberg and New Holland girls also play that morning.

Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1 o'clock, the Jackson and New Holland boys will play. The girls' games will be between Pickaway and Perry, and between Washington and Ashville.

Beginning at 7 o'clock Saturday night, the winner of the Muhlenberg Walnut fracas will play the Perry boys and the winner of the Ashville Darby game will play the Saltcreek boys. The Monroe and Scioto girls will swing into action, after which the winners of the Saltcreek-Walnut and Deercreek-Jackson girls' games will compete.

Resume on Thursday
Hostilities will cease until Thursday night, Feb. 23, when the winner of the Deercreek-Monroe game plays the Pickaway boys; the winners of the Jackson-New Holland, and Muhlenberg-Walnut boys' games meet; the winners of Washington-Ashville and Monroe-Scioto girls' games clash, and the winners of the Muhlenberg-New Holland girls' game meets the survivor of the Saltcreek, Walnut, Deercreek and Jackson series.

The semi-finals will be played on

SPORTSMATTER BY FRANK GETTY

A correspondent who has for some time been honoring this column with extraneous advice now comes to the fore with some suggestions regarding chess and kindred sports. Joe Carupa is well known to our readers and needs no introduction. Here is his latest letter:

"Dear Sir:
"I see you published the letter I sent you giving you the dope on the boxing situation. I think you have some sense after all. I will now write you about an idea that I have that somebody ought to jump on before somebody else does.

"I see by the papers that a guy that won the world's chess title is holding out for a bigger guarantee. Well, you can't blame him for that. But the idea I have is why don't they whoopee this situation so it will mean something instead of just being a pain in the neck.

"When he last chess was fought some people said it was in the bag. I am for that. That is what gave me my idea. I don't believe it was, or it would have been interesting.

"Now that is what I am getting at. If somebody would work up a little noise over the chess situation and say there wasn't any logical contender and all that hokey like you do about boxing or whatever there's a champion of, they could stage a world series at Madison Square Garden. You will say it takes fifteen or twenty minutes to make a move and everybody would walk out on them. Well, try and make Tex Rickard sore by walking out after you've been in. But they wouldn't. They would stay in and make remarks like take your whiskers out of that soup, etcetera, and chess players are very temperamental like tennis players.

"But my idea is to combine some similar sport like wrestling that also takes about fifteen minutes to make a move, and put it in between moves. They could start off snappy with the first move in the chess and then start the first wrestling bout. At the end of ten minutes they could ring a bell to show people there was only five minutes left for Flat Face like to throw his opponent and also that Battling Bogoljubov only had five minutes to start the second chess move. Then the excitement would get big and finally after the four-minute bell and three-minute bell, etcetera, whoever's turn it was to win would get a full and vice versa on the chess.

"If you object of this I would say help yourself about the game you have with the chess. It might be ice hockey. That's my idea of another good bag game. I saw a game once and nobody can tell me that anybody could put that little MUCK in the cage if I was there trying to stop it. Also I see a light go up by the cage about the same time every goal is made. You will say that don't mean anything, but don't try and tell me.

"What I mean to say is there are enough saps to get a crowd to anything if you only arrange it properly and inject the element of sport namely that there will be a lot of argument and nobody wins too often. By combining chess and some other game you would: 1.—Introduce a new sport. 2.—Get the chess public to know the other game. 3.—Get the other game public to know the chess. 4.—Thereby win both ways, which is the idea in sport.

"Hoping you will publish this for it is the goods.

"JOE CARUPA."

C. A. C. DOWNS NEW HOLLAND IN FAST GAME

Club Boys Come From Behind To Conquer Visitors By 37 to 23 Score.

It looked for a while as though the C. A. C. boys were in for another loss at the gym, Thursday night, when they defeated New Holland, by a 37 to 23 count.

Opening with the second string men the club got off to a poor start. Somehow or other the club boys could not get going. Doing a lot of bad passing and fumbling with New Holland displaying superior floor work over them, the visitors managed to get a six point lead. At this point, Coach Rader sent in the regulars, but even they could not check the boys from across the river, and the half ended with New Holland on the long end of an 11 to 7 score, and it looked as though the club was whipped. Even though the visitors did have a margin of only four points.

The second half started with a bang and New Holland started to pile up points until they had the score 18 to 9. Right here, Capt. Robinson called time out for a conference. After that it was too bad. The club team settled down, and at the end of the third quarter had New Holland's lead to an 18-15 margin.

The last quarter saw the club boys in their true form. They outplayed the New Holland quintet so consistently that it appeared as though they had just been taking it easy. They scored 12 points, while New Holland was gleaming but 5 markers.

Jim Gatrell was high scorer of the game with nine field goals for 12 points to his credit, eight of

during the last 15 minutes of play was perfect. Each man played his position with a precision of a well balanced machine, overwhelming the visitors with its regularity.

New Holland has a good, clean, hard working team, and displayed some wonderful team work in spots.

The sporty looking tractor on display at Brehmer's garage is the mowing and raking machine for the Pickaway County club. It won't be long now until it will be running around mowing out the fairways and roughs. It has a rake and a mower that is going to do a lot a business with the blue grass at the club.

This machine will no doubt become a very familiar sight to the golfers as it sneaks up behind the laggards on the greens, and with its engine, drowns out the profanity of the unfortunates in the sand traps—if any.

One of the fine features of the new links is, that there are plenty of trees to wrap a driver around, after a graceful slice, and a sparkling stream to toss a mid-iron into after a hectic hook.

PELTZER WILL SHOW FLEETNESS TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(INS)—Dr. Otto Peltzer, the runner, will fly the colors of Germany tonight in a 1,000 meter race in connection with the Illinois athletic club' eleventh annual handicap track and field meet at the riding club.

Peltzer, the only European to defeat the great Paavo Nurmi, will encounter Ray Dodge and Ray Conger of the I. A. C. and Leo Larrivee of the Chicago A. A. in tonight's job of 1,000 meters.

Among those running under the banner of the I. A. C. is Joie 'come-back' Ray, a crack sprinter of a few years back. Ray, until restored to the good graces of the A. A. U. by the central board last Wednesday, was an outcast. After an absence of two years he attempts to reach the peak again in the two-mile-run.

A. A. Stagg, athletic director of the university of Chicago, will referee the entire program of nine-teen events.

FARM STOCK

FEED WORK HORSE BALANCED RATION

The horse is no different from other animals in that the ration should be reasonably balanced in regard to protein, carbohydrates, fats, oils and fiber. It should be remembered that a horse on heavy work requires twice as much protein as the same horse when on light work. The more severe the labor of the horse, the larger must be the supply of nutrients. The stomach of a horse has a capacity of 19 quarts while the stomach of a cow may hold 267 quarts, so it is evident that a horse at hard work cannot well derive most of its nourishment from roughage. Since the ration must not have an undue amount of roughage, this necessitates a large proportion of concentrates high in energy content. When horses are severely worked, the roughage ration is cut down and the concentrates increased.

The standard ration of concentrates for the American horse consists of two-thirds oats and one-third ear corn by weight. Every Saturday night, wheat bran is substituted for oats. The horse is allowed about two ounces of salt a day, but this is never mixed with the feed.

Timothy hay is the standard roughage for the horse throughout the United States. The freedom from dust of good timothy hay commands it as a horse feed and it is an excellent roughage for animals whose sustenance comes mostly from concentrates. A reasonable allowance of timothy is one pound daily for 100 pounds of animal.

Properly cured legume hay is usually more palatable than other roughages, so if horses are given an excess amount of legume hay, there is some danger that they may consume too much. Legume hays are suitable to balance corn or other concentrates low in protein. Legume hays, if they are properly put up so that they are not dusty, may be fed advantageously.

Alfalfa for Brood Sow

Is Extremely Valuable

It is a well recognized fact that alfalfa is the best hog pasture crop we have. Every hog producer should have a patch of it for that purpose. He should have more than that; he should have alfalfa hay for his brood sows as well as for his fall pigs. The fact is that alfalfa hay should be provided for all farm stock. It can be grown on practically every farm in Iowa, though in most cases lining of the soil will be necessary in order to get a stand, says the Iowa Homestead.

Mature brood sows that are being fed one pound of corn per 100 pounds of live weight per day and one-fourth of a pound of tankage per head per day in addition will eat half to three-fourths of a pound of alfalfa hay daily. The great value derived from the feeding of it lies in the fact that it gives bulk to the ration and because it furnishes protein, mineral matter and vitamins. Its vitamin content seems to be extremely valuable.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

12 years old; one black cow, 3 years old; two fat sows, 400 lbs. each; two large 180 lb. double bred work horses; one Ford touring car model 1925; one John Deere breaking plow; one John Deere riding cultivator; one disc harrow; 125 shocks of corn in field, and 50 head of mixed chickens.

Emperor's Fur Coat Is Offered At Auction In Vienna Cigar Store

VIENNA, Feb. 10. (INS)— "The Fur Travelling Coat of Emperor Francis Joseph, made of Siberian wolves' hides, is to be sold at a very low price."

This advertisement in the show window of a Viennese cigar store is a startling reminder of the changes wrought in the former Austro-Hungarian capital since the war.

The coat of the Kaiser, which like all his clothing, retained a flavor of the respect which was paid to the person of His Majesty himself, was once only to be touched by persons of the highest rank. Later the emperor bestowed it as a reward for merit on his Adjutant Count Paar.

It is now offered to anybody who can pay 1200 schillings, about $170.

In Vedic Literature

Upanishad is defined as follows: "One of a class of speculative treatises concerned with the nature of man and the universe, forming a part of the Vedic literature." The Sanskrit word means literally "a sitting down (at the feet of an authority) to listen to his words" esoteric doctrines."—Washington Star.

Roosters Mustn't Crow At Night French Court Says In Curious Case

PARIS, Feb. 10. (INS)— Roosters shall not crow at night. So decides Justice of the Peace Timothee of Marly le Roi, village on the banks of the Seine near Paris, in the most curious case ever presented to French courts for settlement.

Paul Gruyer, an author, now engaged in translating the works of Jack London, filed suit against his neighbor M. Arnaudin, a chicken fancier, for $40 damages because M. Arnaudin's cocks crowed so strenuously and so continually M. Gruyer was not able to work days or sleep night.

Justice Timothee awarded M. Gruyer one franc damage, ruling that the roosters should be allowed to crow to their hearts' content during the day but that the author was entitled to complete quiet at night.

The learned justice of the peace suggested that they be cooped up in pens so low that they could not stretch their necks. The justice's recipe is being tested.

Time Wasted in Dreams

It is easy to neglect the things we can do in dreaming of the things we might do. Many a day holds undone the homely tasks that need doing, while the one to whom they are committed discontentedly dreams of great deeds that are impossible.—Exchange.

Britain Will Nurse $500,000 Gift Until It Reaches $65,000,000

LONDON, Feb. 10. (INS)— In a hundred years from now the British government will receive $65,000,000 as a gift to relieve the British taxpayer in his payment of the national debt, which includes the war debts.

In fact the treasury has already received $500,000 of this amount. It was presented to the government by an Englishman who prefers to remain anonymous. He gave the sum with the stipulation that it be invested at compound interest for a century, at which time it must be used to help pay the national debt.

This sum invested at 5 per cent compound interest, will amount in 100 years to $65,000,000. The identity of the giver is stated to be known only to four people, including the Prime Minister and Mr. Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer.

New Orleans Ready To Greet King Rex

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 10. (UP)— Plans for Mardi Gras—famous New Orleans carnival season were taking form gradually as January drew to a close. Preparations already are being made to make this year's celebration one of the most elaborate in the city's history.

Several preliminary balls already have been held or are scheduled for the near future. Society of the Crescent City turns out to these to honor the different royal rulers of the carnival organizations.

The concluding climax to the historical celebration will come Feb. 21, when King Rex, in all his splendor, will parade the streets and masking will be the order of the day. At that time all vehicular traffic will be shut out of the business district and the area turned over to the maskers.

London Americans Plan Lincoln Day

LONDON, Feb. 10. (UP)— Celebrations of Lincoln's birthday here will be briefer than usual due to the fact that Feb. 12 falls on Sunday. During the morning a few of the handful of surviving members of the London Branch of the American Civil War Veterans will place wreaths on the Lincoln monument across the street from Westminster Abbey. As is their annual custom, the Veterans will hold a short memorial service at the monument. During the day other American organizations in London and a number of individuals will place wreaths and flowers on the monument.

The annual Lincoln day dinner will be held at the American Women's club during the evening.

WATCHES ARE EXPLAINED TO ROTARY CLUB

Development of Timepieces and Science of Chronology Told By Burns.

Why your watch ticks, when time was first started and how the watch-making has advanced to one of the real scientific industries in the world was concretely and minutely explained before Rotarians at their noonday luncheon in the Boggs hotel, Thursday, by Joe Burns, who is employed in L. M. Butch jewelry store as a watchmaker. Rotarian Press Enderlin introduced the speaker.

Mr. Burns said that the first crude system of recording time was started several centuries B. C., but that it was not until the sixteenth century that the first clock was invented and even then it was not the accurate timekeeper that clocks are today.

Time By Stars

He also elucidated on how the government naval station records correct time by the aid, not of the sun as most people seem to think, but by the stars. There is a difference of four hours in time between the Atlantic and the Pacific ocean in this country, he explained.

"The spring in your watch is more apt to break during the months of June, July, August and September," the watchmaker explained, "due to electrical storms and the condition of the weather."

Just why some watches and clocks keep correct time and others do not, is not always explainable, he said, as the watchmaker is not infallible.

Brehmer Gets Wig

The Swiss watches are superior to American-made watches in many respects, he declared, but now Americans are making watches in some instances that are just as good as perfect timekeepers.

Rotarian Bob Brehmer was presented with a "head adornment" in the way of a wig by Rotarian

WILLIAM EVERETT DERRYBERRY
(International Illustrated News)

ATTENTION, GIRLS! If you're looking for the perfect man during leap years, you don't have to go any further than William Everett Derryberry, star athlete and student of the University of Tennessee.

"A man whose like we have never seen before," was the version of the judges in selecting Derryberry over 15 other candidates to receive the state's Rhodes Scholarship.

Here's why:—
1. He was a star halfback at the university for three years;
2. All his grades have been "A";
3. He's the best student Tennessee ever had;
4. He swims, plays baseball, basketball and golf far above the average;
5. He sings, plays in the band, directs a church choir and is a member of the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. cabinet.

wilderness hunter or fisherman. Mr. Stuber spoke of clean sportsmanship as good citizenship, and urged that the heritage of hunting and fishing be handed down to future generations.

Mr. Stuber told of the good work of the fish and game department at Columbus in building hatcheries and re-stocking with fish and game, and of the extensive program planned by the department and the sportsmen's organizations this year. He showed motion picture reels of the state fish hatcheries, demonstrating the work of the fish and game department of which D. O. Thompson is chief.

Several reels of fishing pictures taken in Canada on the French River, and in New Brunswick and other Canadian fishing places, were shown by Mr. Stuber through the courtesy of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Sportsman's Digest, one of the leading outdoor publications of which Mr. Stuber is chief of the editorial staff.

The League of Ohio Sportsmen of which the new organization here is affiliated, has 50 associated organizations in Ohio, and a membership of thousands of farmers and sportsmen in all parts of the state. A Department of Conservation for Ohio like in Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana and other states, is being planned, as the fish and game department has outgrown its place in the Department of Agriculture of which it is now a branch.

All the work of re-stocking, warden's salaries, and entire maintenance of the fish and game department of Ohio is carried on through sportsmen's license money without the cost of a dollar to the taxpayers, Mr. Stuber stated. Ohio sportsmen turn into the treasury of the fish and game department $400,000 per year for preservation of hunting and fish, and for upkeep of the department. The new association will ask for game protector services in this county at once, and an increase of allowance for patrol work of the game protector. The sportsmen have a surplus of $300,000 at Columbus, out of which this can be paid, without cost to the taxpayers. The League of Ohio Sportsmen was father of the sportsmen's license system in Ohio, the speaker advised. The new association will have a director in the League.

Officers Elected

Officers elected for the Farmers and Sportsmen's Protective Association Thursday night were: E. H. Rausenberger, president; Loring Huffman, vice president; Walter Kinder, secretary, and Felix Caldwell, treasurer. On the directorate were named: Judge Charles Dresbach, chairman; Wilson Dunkle, George Goodchild, R. L. Brehmer, John Walters, Frank Alkire, Earl Rader, Lee Shaner, C. E. Roof and

ELECTED CLERK OF CHURCH FOR LIFE

MARYSVILLE, O., Feb. 10.—(INS)—Common Pleas Judge E. W. Porter, of this city, is sure of one job for life. For forty-five years he has been clerk of the First Congregational church here. Among his records is one to the effect that the congregation voted him clerk for life.

Judge Porter has always taken an active part in Sunday school and church work. He has served as superintendent of the Sunday school and has been a deacon in the church for many years.

Judge Porter has been practicing law in Marysville since 1881. He served two terms as prosecuting attorney, two terms as probate judge, and is now serving his first term as common pleas judge. His father, John L. Porter, was judge of the common pleas court of this district several years ago.

EYE WITNESSES DESCRIBE HILL SLAYING

"The Fox" Declared Sane When He Killed Child

QUICK VERDICT GIVEN BY JURY IN NOTED CASE

Noose or Life Sentence Will
Be Pronounced Saturday
By Trial Judge.

By ARTHUR L. MAREK
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 10—
While the spectre of the gallows hovered over the head of William Edward Hickman, awaiting sentence for the kidnaping and killing of 12-year-old Marion Parker, a new fight for his life was launched by his attorneys today.

Declared by a jury of four women and eight men to have been sane when he stole and slew the little school girl, Hickman's only hope of escape from the noose lies in the appeal which Jerome Walsh his chief attorney, announced he would make from Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco's expected sentence.
The remorseless youth who bar-tered the mutilated body of his little victim for $1,500 ransom, will be brought before Judge Trabucco tomorrow morning to hear sentence imposed. His sentence will be either death on the scaffold or life imprisonment, depending upon Judge Trabucco's determination of his degree of guilt.

To Ask New Trial
Walsh has announced that he will move for a new trial when Hickman is arraigned for sentence.
This motion is expected to pave the way for an appeal from the convictions implied by the jury's swift verdict that the Kansas City youth was sane at the time he kidnaped the Parker girl and sane at the time he killed her.

Hickman's attorneys cloistered themselves in their office today, co-ordinating argument for an appeal to the California supreme court.

While they did not specify on what grounds the appeal would be based, it was said that the customary routine objections, errors of the trial judge and the failure of the court to properly instruct the jury would form the argumentative groundwork with the possibility that the constitutionality of the law under which Hickman was convicted would be attacked.

Many Objections
During the trial both Walsh and his associate, Richard Cantillon of Los Angeles, entered numerous objections. Each of these, it was said, would find its way into the appeal.

In conformance with the in-

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 10 — Reports that two escaped prisoners had been seen without the two deputy sheriffs with whom they disappeared led to renewed fears today that the sheriff had been overcome and killed or disabled.

Discovery of a filed pair of handcuffs in South Chicago added to the indication that the prisoners had won their freedom.

The two prisoners were Samuel Baxter and John Burns, convicted of burglary. The deputies were John P. Grove and Wallace Mc-Clure, who left with the prisoners Tuesday morning for the state reformatory at Pendleton, 70 miles away and had not been heard from since.

Local Farmers And Sportsmen Form Protective Association

Promotion of Hunting and Fishing in Pickaway County Will
Be Sought Here—Officers Elected.

Farmers and sportsmen from many parts of the county met at the Elks Home Thursday night and formed an organization known as the Pickaway County Farmers and Sportsmen's Protective Association.
The purpose of the organization, composed of outdoorsmen, is to restock suitable territory with pheasants and game birds, raccoons, and other game from the state game farms and to re-stock waters free from pollution with game-fish from the state fish hatcheries, and to oppose stream pollution.

The organization will also promote friendly co-operation between farmers and sportsmen, co-operate in fish and game law enforcement, use its influence to prevent malicious destruction of property by hunters or fisherman, and to prevent trespassing without permission. An effort will be made to secure a state game refuge in the county and also to have the fish and game department at Columbus repair and use the old canal bed as a fish hatchery and as public fishing waters, also.

Application for a consignment of fish will be filed with state authorities at Columbus at once, and a delegation of farmers and sportsmen will go to Columbus to consult with the chief of the fish and game department on securing the proposed hatchery.

Stuber Speaks
J. W. Stuber, secretary of the League of Ohio Sportsmen of Columbus assisted in organizing the association, and told of the splendid results accomplished through co-operation of farmers and sportsmen in other counties.

"Wherever there is an organization of this kind there is more hunting and fishing, for everybody," Stuber said. "Some of the organizations have as many as 2-000 members," he stated. Stuber game and more fish and better hunting and fishing.

CIRCLEVILLE YOUTH IS HELD ILLEGALLY IN PENITENTIARY

A jury in the Kansas county department Judge Adkins sent him back to Lancaster.

Later, he was again paroled with the understanding that he would go to work. He returned to Circleville to live with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Clark, but two weeks later he ran away and was next heard of when he was arrested in Kansas.

Today the Kansas state penitentiary, holds Bowsher at Lansing, Kan., without legal right.
Originally sentenced to a state industrial school, the Circleville youth caused officials of the school so much trouble that he was transferred to the state reformatory.

From the latter institution, he was brought to the penitentiary here, without even the formality of a sentence. This move was followed by a sanity hearing, at which Bowsher was declared insane, thus giving the state legal right to confine him in the insanitary ward of the penitentiary.

BELIEVE GRAVE HOLDS BODY OF SLAIN WOMAN

New Philadelphia Authorities
Fail to Find Corpse in Tuscarawas River.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Feb. 10 —(UP) —Searchers continued dragging the Tuscarawas river and were beating through the underbrush along the Dover-Canton highway today, hoping to find the body of 23-year-old Viola May.

Police meanwhile, became more convinced hourly that the girl's brother-in-law, William D. Herron who confessed he choked her to death, did not drop the body into the Tuscarawas, but probably buried it in a shallow grave.

Sheriff Abe Laird advanced the theory Herron had hacked the body to pieces and buried it in a shallow grave. Two axes were found in Herron's abandoned automobile and later a piece of bloody clothing, believed Miss May's was discovered near a grave pit. Laird said, however, that the axes bore no blood stains.

Place Fences in River
It was at the gravel pit that Herron first attacked the girl, after they and one of Miss May's girl friends, left Herron's house where the girls visited Miss May's sister.
The girl friend was left at her home and Herron drove to the gravel pit and parked.

Miss May resisted his advances,
he said, and he "choked her too long." Herron said he dropped the body into the Tuscarawas from a bridge at Dover.

Fences were stretched across the river below the bridge today, officials hoping that Miss May's body, if it were thrown into the river, would be caught as it washed down stream. Scores of searchers, augmenting city and county police, continued meanwhile to search the gravel pit and beat about the underbrush in the belief that the body was buried or hidden.

Reward Offered
The New Philadelphia Times today had offered a $100 reward for recovery of the body. The Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies were to meet and were expected to increase the offer. The prospect of reward spurred the searchers and it was believed the girl's body would be found by night.

The state, meanwhile, was powerless to file charges against Herron who has made two attempts at suicide since his arrest. In the absence of the body, authorities had only Herron's story to go on.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH., Feb.
10 —(UP) —Intensive search was made today for a youth who kidnaped five-year-old Helen Gillett and was preparing, apparently, to murder her with a butcher knife when discovered by her father.

The manhunt started when Walton, local factory worker reported to police that Lester Daniels, 21, seized his daughter while she was at play and took her to the shack where he held her prisoner.

Water Company Seeks To Issue Bonds To Buy Circleville Plant

Marysville and Washington C. H. Properties Are Also Involved in Application Made By Service Firm of Ohio Utilities Commission.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10 —(IN S) —The Ohio Water Service company, formerly The Massillon Water Supply company, today applied to the state utilities commission for permission to issue and sell 10,155 shares of its no-par purpose of refunding certain outstanding securities and to purchase the properties of The Marysville Water company and the Circleville and Washington C. H. plants of The Water Service Corporation.

The Ohio Water company proposed to issue $11,500 in 5 per cent bonds, $40,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock, and 2,292 shares of its no-par common, at $10 per share, in payment for The Marysville Water company's properties, and to issue $500,000 in 5 per cent bonds, $140,000 in 6 per cent preferred and 2,863 shares of no-par common at $10 per share, in payment for the Circleville and Washington C. H. plants.

The commission, also, was asked to authorize the Ohio Water Service company to issue $30,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock and 5,000 shares of no-par common, at $10 per share, in exchange for outstanding securities consisting of $800,000 in 5 1/2 per cent bonds and $350,000 in common stock and to sell $850,000 in 5 per cent bonds and $200,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock, at par, and 997 shares of common at $10 per share proceeds to be used in reimbursing its treasury for uncanceled capital expenditures.

SINGERS TO GIVE CONCERT TONIGHT

Mrs. Louise Malone Braxton, founder of the colored girls' school at Fulton, Ky., who with four other girls sang at the high school Friday morning, will sing at the Colored Baptist church Friday evening at 8 o'clock. She is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama.

Through her music and other efforts she has founded colored schools at Hayneville and Tyson-ville in Alabama, Yazoo City in Mississippi and in Bellevue, a suburb of Macon, Georgia. She is now raising funds for a dormitory, and a free-will offering will be taken, but there will be no admission.

This troupe sang spirituals, the most popular of songs at this time, Thursday night at the Presbyterian church in Kingston where they received a check for $45 from a friend. They sang eight times in Chillicothe last week, and received a large response. They will sing in the Circleville Presbyterian church on Sunday and will return to Chillicothe Monday to sing at the Elks home.

COMRADES OF VICTIM ACCUSE THEIR EX-BOSS

Details of Shooting Given By Witnesses—Trial to Continue Next Week.

Details of the slaying of John Henry Hill, colored, in a camp at the crossing of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad south of Circleville on Nov. 14, 1927, for which James Flint, alias Walter Brown, also colored, is on trial for his life, were told to the jury in the Pickaway county common pleas court room Thursday afternoon and Friday morning.

Flint was accused and identified by two witnesses as the man who fired the two shots which claimed the life of Hill. These witnesses, who have been held in the county jail since the shooting, are Earl Mallett and Willie Jones, both colored, over whom Flint was formerly foreman in the Chesapeake and Hocking railroad construction.

Another reputed eye witness to the slaying Wade "Big Ease" Bivens was scheduled to take the stand Friday afternoon as the last witness for the state on direct testimony. There will be no court Saturday and it is now predicted that the case will not reach the jury until Tuesday and possibly Wednesday.

Identifies Flint
Thursday afternoon Earl Mallett positively identified Flint as the man who arrived at the camp south of Circleville five or ten minutes after Mallett's arrival there.
Mallett said Flint asked for Hill and approached him at the camp fire. Mallett testified that he heard the sound of a blow and saw Hill rise to one knee. Then the fatal shots were fired.

After fleeing from the scene, Mallett said he returned and saw nothing of Flint but heard Hill moan: "Lord have mercy on me."
Mallett then told how he went to John Morgan's house and reported the shooting, saying that someone there telephoned to the sheriff's residence.

On cross examination by the defense attorneys, Mallett said that he had taken one drink that afternoon, but denied that he was or had been intoxicated that day.

Davis Testifies
Other witnesses who testified
Thursday afternoon were Sheriff
Davis, who said that when Mallett told him of the shooting, he could smell liquor on the man's breath, but declared he was not intoxicated. He said that "Jungle," on the jail books as Frank Kellogg, the colored man who was at the camp fire when the sheriff arrived at the scene of the shooting, was searched by Deputy John Ward who found only a rock in the man's pocket.

Deputy John Ward corroborated the statements of Sheriff Davis and told how he made a close search of the home of Charles Bryd, where Flint was arrested, and how he failed to find a weapon
there.

Dr. O. H. Dunton, county coroner, was recalled, and showed the breast of Hill's shirt, revealing the bullet holes. The portion of the shirt was introduced as state evidence as had been the survey of the scene, anatomical chart and the two bullets taken from Hill's body. Dr. Dunton testified that following his inquest he had order-

LOANS UP TO $500

Among the happiest people in the world are those who go through life prepared to pay their own way without having to depend upon the rich relatives—if there are any. When they run short of money they borrow from The City Loan with no more bother than opening an ordinary charge account at the neighborhood grocery. And they use that money just as they wish—a sermon and a book of rules are never included in City Loan service.

The City Loan furnishes thousands of dollars for these people who demand all the safety, friendliness and personal attention of a relationship loan, yet who prefer it to be a confidential business affair for the sake of pride and independence.

French Houses Pretty but Not Comfortable

Have you ever—but of course you have—raced down in a too swift train from Cherbourg to Paris, through the French countryside on a spring afternoon when all the apple trees in Normandy are in full bloom? And through the trees you catch a glimpse of little old farmhouses that have stood there in the midst of their flowering orchards for centuries? Enchanting, these little houses; but according to modern standards hardly comfortable, says Arts and Decorations. Once inside, we should find the rooms too small and crowded; the windows too small to admit of proper ventilation; the kitchen antiquated, and the work done there made doubly difficult because of lack of equipment. No, these little houses are lovely to look at; on a walking trip, if light came on too quickly, one might enjoy staying over night, perhaps, sharing a French supper with the farmer's household, on family gathered about the kitchen table; sleeping in one of the little rooms under the thatched roof, listening to the sleeping chirp of birds in the long soft twilight. But to live in one of these houses—impossible. It remains for our own young country to combine much of the charm of these old Normandy farmhouses with Twentieth century comfort.

Device Said to Be Superior to X-Ray

Dr. Andre Tours, a Frenchman, has discovered a means of making the human body transparent, so that all the organs will be seen working as in a mirror. The doctor has refused all financial assistance, and also an offer to go to the United States. He is determined that the first data shall be given to medical men of France.

If flesh can be made transparent so that the bones can be seen clearly by surgeons and osteopaths, X-rays will be dispensed with in locating internal troubles. The doctor in future will be able to see the trouble at once without diagnosing blindly. In cases of consumption and cancer the transparency of flesh will be an enormous boon to medical men.

Doctor Tours claims that his discovery will assist experts in tracing the cause of death where murder is suspected. The presence of poison will be easily detected, and in the case of shooting the exact course of a bullet will be traced.

Explained

The newly appointed pastor of a negro church faced a packed audience when he arose to deliver a sermon on the burning question: "Is There a Hell?" "Bredren," he said, "de Lord made de world round like a ball." "Amen!" agreed the congregation.

"And de Lord made two axles for de world to go round on, one axle at de North pole and one axle at de Souf pole.

"And de Lord put a lot of oil and grease in de center of de world, so as to keep de axles well greased and oiled."

"Amen!" said the congregation. "And then a lot of sinners dig wells in Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Mexico and Russia, and steal de Lord's oil and grease.

"And some day dey will have all of de Lord's oil and grease, and dem axles is gonna git hot. And den, dat will be hell, bredren, dat will be hell."—Prairie Farmer.

Former Employers Of Dead Jockey Remember His Early Activities In Pickaway And Ross Counties

The death of Thomas Freal, 63, at Columbus, has brought many stories of the fame which he once enjoyed as a crack race-horse trainer and jockey, but none are so interesting as the reminiscences of James Shook and Peter White Brown, two Chillicotheans for whom Freal was up on his horse, 80's and 90's.

Freal was a native of Pickaway county. When just a youngster, he took to the race tracks as a means of finding a livelihood. He became an expert trainer and a wonderful jockey. Any owner was satisfied when Freal was up on his horse, because the owner knew that the horse would get good handling and a good ride.

From local fame, Freal stepped into larger fields. He rode on every important track in the United States and in Canada. Later he went to Europe and his ability as a steeple-chaser rider won him the fullest measure of fame. Kings, queens and others members of nobility were thrilled by his performance and lauded his efforts. Freal rode many races in Mexico and Australia. When he returned to the United States he had accumulated weight and lost his jockey standing. He began playing the races. Repeated losses dwindled down the comfortable fortune he had accumulated.

Conversing on Freal's riding in Ross county, Messrs. Brown and Shook recall that he rode at many of the county fairs and circuit races after the early 70's. Freal's first attempt at riding was at Commercial Point. Mr. Brown states. A gray mare was racing on the Commercial Point track, but had established a reputation for being unruly at the barrier. It was her habit to throw her rider before the race started. Many a jockey would take one fall and then refuse to ride the gray mare, says Mr. Brown.

Freal, who was a lover of horses and knew how to handle them, heard of the gray mare. She was to be raced on a certain day, and Freal walked from his home, which was in the vicinity of Amanda, to Commercial Point. Freal stated to his friends that the gray mare would throw her regular "jock" and that he might get a chance to ride her. The mare did just as Freal had prophesied. The jockey refused to take chances on a second fall. Freal offered to substitute and was soon clad in the silks of a jockey for the first time in his life. He rode the mare successfully and won the race, Mr. Brown recalls.

After the Commercial Point race, Mike Miller, South Bloomfield, brought Freal down to the D. Jerry Crouse stables, near Kimmicknick. Crouse hired the under-sized, red-haired Irish youngster to work in the stables and as a rider. In 1880 or shortly after, Freal was riding for Mr. Brown. He rode Contest and Ohio Boy, two famous Brown horses, at county fairs and on Latonia, Detroit and Windsor tracks. Freal's last appearance as a jockey in Ross county was about 30 years ago on the county fair track, when he rode a horse by the name of Billy Dillon.

Freal trained horses for Mr. Shook. At one time, Freal was employed by Dan Ater, Williamsport, as a trainer.

Keep youth longer! cleanse the system of poisons

Two of the great enemies to youth and vitality are delayed elimination and intestinal poisons. To keep yourself free from both these common difficulties will help you to stay young.

With the use of Nujol you can do it too. For Nujol absorbs body poisons and carries them off, preventing their absorption by the body. Nujol also softens the waste matter and brings about normal evacuation. It is harmless; contains no drugs or medicine. It won't cause gas or griping pains, or affect the stomach or kidneys. Every corner druggist has Nujol. Make sure you get the genuine. Look for the Nujol bottle with the label on the back that you can read right through the bottle. Don't delay, get Nujol today.

HOME'S SANCTITY UPHELD BY COURT

CLEVELAND, Feb. 10 — (IN S)—A "Dry" raider has no authority to search a bona fide private residence even though he be armed with a search warrant and finds a quantity of liquor.

The Cuyahoga county court of appeals today had gone on record to this effect in a unanimous decision handed down here late Thursday, in connection with the suit of State Senator George H. Bender, who started action against State Probation Inspector W. J. Patrick and others, after his home had been raided. No liquor was found and Bender won a $25,000 judgment.

4 Great Plants At capacity to meet demand For the Perfected Whippet

So rapidly has demand mounted for the perfected Whippet, that four great plants—Toledo, Elmira, Pontiac and Toronto—are taxed to capacity, and enlargement and expansion to permit even greater production, are already under way. People continue to express amazement that cars of such remarkable quality and mechanical perfection can be offered at such low prices.

Check These Advantages

Whippet alone in the light car field offers these features and welcome comparison—big 4-wheel brakes, low swung bodies, gasoline tank on rear, full force feed lubrication, silent timing chain, oversize balloon tires, Timken bearings, bronze back main bearings, honed piston walls, wood wheels, etc.

Etiquette of Divorce and Remarriage Has Fine Points

WIFE AND EX-WIFE AS BOSOM FRIENDS

By WINIFRED BLACK

IS it indecent to be friendly with the man you married and divorced—when he's married to another woman? Well, my dear, really, there are so many "ifs" and "ands" about an affair like this, you shouldn't expect an up and down "yes" or "no" answer to such a question as that.

I crossed the ocean with a woman once. She was a nice woman, sweet and gentle, and unusually clever. She came of an old New England family with a name that is known wherever the New England aristocracy is known.

She was traveling with her husband and her little daughter, and one day when I spoke about the little daughter she said: "She isn't my daughter, she's the daughter of the first Mrs. So and So. You know Lottie, don't you? Charming woman, isn't she? She and Harry couldn't get on at all and so she divorced Harry and I married him. I'm awfully fond of Lottie. She's coming to the pier to meet us. She's still fond of Harry and he's fond of her, but they just can't live together, that's all."

All the rest of the voyage over I kept looking at the wife and stepmother, and wondering whether she was really telling me the real truth about the whole strange affair.

When we landed in New York, there she was on the pier—the first wife—smiling and delighted.

From the pier she went home with the man and his wife and her own child, and spent two weeks with them in their little apartment on the Drive.

I knew both women and I liked them both and liked the husband, too, for that matter.

The little girl I liked, too, but most of all I pitied her. What sort of a twisted idea of life and love and marriage she must have! I've often wondered since then what became of her. Did she marry and divorce her husband and marry again and divorce the second husband and marry again? Maybe she went into a convent and became a nun. What do you suppose?

I know two women who married the same man and after the first one divorced her husband and he married the second one, she managed it so that she never saw anything of the second wife at all. She was not angry with her. She had no reason to be. Her husband never heard of the second wife until the first wife divorced him. But somehow she felt that it was rather like—oh, I don't know, wearing somebody else's clothes or borrowing some exceedingly intimate garment. But when the man died and each of the two women married again, they became good friends.

Why not? But while he was living, well, my dear, it may be all right—but somehow it isn't quite what you might call "sensitive," is it, to keep up such a friendship? Do you think so, really?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of 18 and am very deeply in love with a fellow two years my senior. I think he loves another girl. Please advise me how I can win his love.

ANXIOUS: I must caution you against attempting to take the initiative in a matter of this sort, my dear. Advise you to let this boy do his own choosing. If you are a congenial, attractive and interesting companion I am sure he will be more responsive to your charms and may, in time, prefer you to this other girl. It would be most inadvisable for you to reveal your attitude to him in any way but, if you are subtle and tactful, I am sure you will be able to win this boy's admiration if you make yourself charming and prove a desirable companion.

Love's Embers Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" By Adele Garrison

Madge Promises to Put a Stop to Jerry Ticer's Gossip.

DICKY reddened at Lillian's rallery and put out a protesting hand as I arose to carry out her suggestion that I interview Jerry Ticer and find out how much publicity he had given to Dicky's sketching of Eleanor Lincoln. "I don't like to have you do that, Madge," he said with genuine concern in his voice. "It isn't fair to put—"

"We'll consider it all twitted, Dicky-bird," Lillian interrupted. "But don't delay the game, Madge is the only one who can handle the Ticer family, and you know it. By the way, Madge, I saw Mrs. Ticer and Jerry drive past toward their home a little while ago. If you hurry you can catch them there and save yourself a trip to The Larches. And let me add Mother Graham's injunction, 'Don't dawdle! Dicky and I will be waiting with mouths wide open until you get back.'"

"I'll hurry," I promised, and departed with a show of alacrity. I was anything but enthusiastic, however, over my errand, and only the remembrance that Dicky really had been genuinely distressed at my going kept me from being bitterly resentful at the part assigned me in this farce—for such the whole affair of Eleanor Lincoln's deception of Philip Veritzen seemed to me.

But, of course, my common sense as to his part of the mission told me that if the task of silencing Jerry Ticer were to be given to any member of our family, I was the one who ingenuously should receive it. Although Lillian had not mentioned it, we all knew that any admission of Dicky's to Jerry would be looked upon with the mistrustful skepticism as to his part of the mission told me that if the task of silencing Jerry Ticer were to be given to any member of our family, I was the one who ingenuously should receive it.

Daytime Frocks Are Notable for Smart Lines and Effective Materials.

By Marie Marot

IT is not hard to discover the reason for the survival of tailored lines, in spite of the femininity, for in no other way can the ease and grace of the slim silhouette in daytime and sports frocks be achieved, as with the simplicity of masculine lines. These, however, have none of the severity that was notable in past seasons. Novel fabrics are used to give a distinctly feminine effect and lines are broken to relieve any suggestion of harshness. Necklines and waists vary according to the individual, and plaits, godets and circular flares all have their place in this versatile mode.

The daytime costume really is the most important in the average women's wardrobe and to this the greatest consideration should be given. It is essential that such costumes avoid a tiresome similarity while any suggestion of the pretentious is, of course, bad taste. There is a happy medium, but in seeking it care should be taken to avoid monotony of design.

There is a decided contrast in the two costumes shown here. They might be worn successfully for any outdoor daytime occasion at the Southern resorts.

One has the long tunic that has been so popular all season. It is slightly bloused and the buttons on the surplus line of the front relieve the severity. The applied bands on the wide hem and sleeves are of a darker material that also makes the skirt.

The slim silhouette is emphasized by the straight one-piece frock of crepe de Chine that is worn with a jacket of flannel with a collar that is distinctly military in effect.

Bossing the Job Is an Art in Itself

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

YOU may call yourself an employer if you have a directing influence in the organization of which you are the head or a part.

And if you do not already possess such a directing influence you are undoubtedly striving to do so some day.

There are few men who do not want to be on top. Every man desires to be a boss.

Occasionally one finds an individual who prefers working for someone else so as to be relieved of all responsibility.

This is not, however, natural to the male sex. Men who have no ambitions to boss others around are often neurotic. The so-called "inferiority complex" has got them.

To be a progressive employer is not as easy as it looks and it is well to examine yourself to find out whether you are ready to be an employer or, if you are an employer already, if you are as progressive as you might be.

An employer's first concern, of course, is to find the best possible worker or workers for the job in hand. Next he must try to find the best possible methods, the most improved ways of doing things, the latest in everything that applies to the work in question. That is the way to get the best results.

And results are what count. All these essentials are not sufficient, though, if the employer has not learned to get the best out of himself. The character of the boss is invariably shown in the character of the office, store, or factory.

The carelessness of an employer shows carelessness in the workers and in the product.

If the boss is rude and impolite, so will the office and sales force be.

If the boss is lazy and indifferent, the rest of the concern will soon follow suit.

An employer should never lose sight of the human equation with reference to those who are working for him and with him.

Snobbishness, aloofness, a high-and-mighty, big-sick attitude will never get an employer very far.

Such an attitude really shows weakness. The employer, perhaps, not altogether realizing it, hides behind his assumed superiority for fear of being found out.

The genuinely strong and dominant personality is, generally speaking, unobtrusive in manners and appearance. Such a while being also has a wholesome respect and deference for the feelings and wishes of others.

Although he may possess a just and dispassionate estimate of his own worth and achievements, he has also gauged his own limitations and has made an inventory of his strong and weak points.

Common sense and experience have taught the really superior man the folly of sham and pretense, the absurdity of hiding behind conceit in order to impress his associates. Nowadays people are not easily fooled. In fact, their natural suspiciousness keeps them constantly on the alert.

The job of employer is not such an easy one, after all, if you really want to be progressive.

Tomorrows HOROSCOPE By Genevieve Kemble.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11. Victory and defeat every man gains or sustains not at the hands of another but of himself.

This day's planetary configurations point to opportunities for great gains and advancement if small anxieties and complications are carefully disposed of. Those in the employment of others are under a good way for seeking preference or increase of salary, and all may approach superiors or those in authority with confidence of an indulgent hearing and recognition of abilities.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of recognition of abilities, honors and advancement, especially if in employment. There may be some minor anxieties, but these may be manipulated to advantage by tact and discretion. A child born on this day should be endowed with talents and capacity to rise to high places in employment or in authority, but it should be careful in handling all papers and writings and as to veracity.

Notable Nativity: Thomas A. Edison, inventor.

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

SUFFICIENT water is essential to beauty because it is an essential to health and life. Without water we would die within a few days. With water we can live on for many days without additional nourishment.

Water not only forms a large percentage of all the vital juices of the body such as the blood, saliva and digestive secretions but it is the medium through which the poisons that continually are forming in the system are thrown off. Consequently we need water, and then more water until at least eight glasses have been drunk each day for that is the approximate amount of water exuded through the lungs, kidneys and skin each day.

If a lesser amount of water is taken into the system than is thrown off you can see how a process of drying up begins throughout the body just the same as fruitful earth becomes barren from lack of rain.

Insufficient water brings about a process of slow poisoning that is just as fatal as a drop of some death-inspiring drug added to one's daily food, for when water is denied, the blood impure and stifle and clog the excretory system until all sorts of dire physical problems arise.

As I said before at least eight glasses of water should be drunk each day to adequately purge the elimination tracts. It is amazing how many cases of skin eruptions can be remedied by this simple expedient for most pimples and blotches can be traced to the one important source—insufficient purging of the system.

The use of water on the outside of the body is equally important for if impurities are carried to the surface of the skin by the internal use of water the outside of the skin must be kept open by thorough cleansing so that the impurities are not impeded in their exit.

Daily bathing, using warm water, soap and a flesh brush is the only method by which the pores can be sufficiently freed to permit adequate elimination through the skin.

And so we have water inside and water outside as the most important factor in achieving or preserving physical beauty and daintiness.

Seen Along Fifth Avenue Flat box-pleats on skirt and blouse give a very new line, which is most becoming to the slender woman.

The standard colors for hosiery are: gunmetal, seashell, dust, French nude and beige. Variations of these shades are also worn, but the five colors are always correct.

Fulness from the shoulder, or below it, promises to be an important feature of the Spring coat.

Suits for Spring will be manfully tailored, and generally of tweed.

WHY DODGE EFFORTS TO INSURE HEALTH?

Dr. Copeland Has a Word to Say to Those Who Know the Rules of Hygiene But Won't Practise Them.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

"IT is a little word with a big meaning." So said a small boy to me the other day. We were talking about the strong bodies we might have if we were to do certain things. Then it was he commented in the words I have quoted.

"It" is indeed a word big with meaning and importance. What wonders we could accomplish if—! What vigorous health we would have if—! The truth is that the average individual knows more about how to live than he admits even to himself. Certainly he knows more than he admits to his friends.

If this is true, and I believe it is, the average person could have better health and be more useful if he would live up to the knowledge of the things necessary to do in order to have perfect health. In short, he would be better off if he did his full duty to himself.

Too much of our time is spent in making excuses. A friend of mine says he never admits or denies anything. I am not quite sure about the morals of this mental attitude, but I declare I would rather put up with the mistakes some of my friends make than to listen to their excuses for what they have done.

If you were to go to bed an hour earlier than you usually do, and make it a practice to get up an hour earlier than you do now, you could spend that hour profitably by exercise in the open air before you sit down to breakfast.

Of course you won't do this. Even though you know it is a good thing to do, it requires effort, and you are not willing to make the effort. If rules would do it, your health would be better and your chance of long life would be increased, but that "little word with a big meaning" stands in the way of your welfare.

How easy it is to drift along with the current of life, taking things as they come. We are unwilling to make the effort necessary to breast the current and to insure our landing in a safer harbor. If we were willing to fight against those inclinations which tend in the direction of the cataclysm of disaster, we would be better off in every respect. But the "little word with a big meaning" interferes.

If you don't do anything else to improve your physical welfare, I beg of you to give regard to the simple rules of hygiene. You need not buy expensive apparatus or visit a gymnasium every day. You need not join an expensive golf club or ride a spirited horse. But if you will cultivate these simple habits which everybody knows are conducive to good health and long life, you will have the strength and vigor to make your career a more useful one.

Answers to Health Queries A. L. Q.—Does the bending exercise tend to reduce the waist line? A.—Yes.

M. T. Q.—Would you consider it harmful to eat only sour milk and coarse bread for two or three weeks in order to reduce weight? A.—I am 20 years of age, 5 ft. 10 inches tall, what should I weigh? A.—How much should a girl aged 6, 4 ft. 2 inches tall weigh, also a girl aged 9, 4 ft. 7 inches tall? A.—Yes. Eat sparingly of starches, sugars and fats. Exercise daily. A gradual reduction in the amount of food consumed, with regular exercise will work wonders in most cases.

2.—Should weigh about 150 pounds. 3.—They should weigh respectively about 53 and 72 pounds. Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Famous Composers By COZETTE DOUGLASS

Etienne Nicolas Mehul.

BORN at Givet in Ardennes on June 24, 1763, of a family too poor to give him the musical education he desired, Etienne Mehul through persistent effort and hard study fanned into a glowing flame the spark of genius with which he was endowed at birth.

Mehul's first instruction in music was received from a blind organist in Givet, and he showed such remarkable ability that at the age of ten years he was appointed organist of the Convent of the Benedictines.

William Hauser, a famous German organist, was engaged in the year 1775 as organist of the Monastery of Lavallien, and so anxious was Mehul to study under this master, that the abbot of the monastery admitted him as a novice, that he might become a pupil of Hauser.

In 1778 Mehul was taken to Paris where he studied composition and piano playing under Edelmund and supported himself by teaching.

Hearing one of his operas, "Euphrosyne et Coradin," accepted and performed by the Theatre Italien, he secured an introduction to him, and on his (Gluck's) advice Mehul determined to turn his talents toward the field of dramatic composition. Presumably he had composed nothing but sacred music.

In 1780 one of his operas, "Euphrosyne et Coradin," accepted and performed by the Theatre Italien, he secured an introduction to him, and on his (Gluck's) advice Mehul determined to turn his talents toward the field of dramatic composition. Presumably he had composed nothing but sacred music.

There is a long list of operas which Gluck from Mehul's pen, but perhaps the most successful were "Le Jeune Henri," "Uthal" and "Joseph." The opera "Uthal" was written with a score which called for no violins.

While Mehul wrote many ballads, symphonies and piano-forte sonatas, his fame rests chiefly on his operas, principally on account of their splendid orchestration and dramatic power. While his symphonies were correctly written, they were totally unoriginal and almost insignificant, although some of his choral works enjoyed a certain vogue.

Mehul died in Paris on October 18, 1817, a victim of consumption, and it is more probable that his death was hastened by disappointment and chagrin at the cool reception given his later operas, which, as one writer has told it, was due to the increasing popularity of Spontini.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES By Blanche Silver

The Queer Little Plant with Ten Little Pockets.

WHEN Willy Bee discovered the stranger blooming beside the mountain-side he stopped to chat.

What in the world is that you have on your legs there?"

"Why, my pockets are so full of pollen they are running over," laughed Willy Bee. "Sometimes I think it's unwise to have pockets in one's legs. You can't carry enough pollen in them. Guess that's one thing you plants don't have to worry about. You haven't any pockets."

"Is that so?" laughed the Stranger. "Well, I see you don't know much about us Laurel Blossoms. Why, Willy Bee, I have ten little pockets in every tiny blossom you see on my bush—ten little pockets, and every one filled with treasures. I was just wishing I could send some pollen to my relatives on the other side of this hill."

"I'll take it over for you myself," said Willy Bee. "I've never been so far away from the bee hive, but I know Mother won't care as long as I'm helping someone else. Will it be another plant just like you?"

hind leg touched one of Mrs. Laurel's hair triggers. Bang, sounded in Willy Bee's ears. He sailed up quickly.

"What's the big idea?" he demanded, shaking all over. "Shooting me? I haven't done you any harm."

Mrs. Laurel Plant was laughing so hard she could hardly talk.

"Why, Willy Bee, I wasn't shooting you. Come here now and let me show you something."

Willy Bee hovered once more over the calico blossoms.

"You just snapped one of the wires that holds in my pollen," laughed Mrs. Laurel Plant. "You see I have ten little pockets in every little blossom and those little pockets are filled with pollen. It only takes the slightest touch to release one of them. Your leg touched one of the hair-triggers and my pollen gun sprinkled you with pollen."

"Sure enough," I chuckled Willy Bee merrily, glancing down at his suit covered with orange-colored pollen. "I'll take it right over to your cousin. I can back again sometime, Mrs. Laurel Plant."

"Indeed, you may any time," replied Mrs. Laurel, "and don't forget to tell your friends about the little plant with ten little pockets."

Willy promised not to forget, and spreading his wings, with a merry buzz, he sailed away to pay his respects to Mrs. Laurel on the other side of the mountain.

Hitching Wagons to Stars.

A Florida man is laying plans for the construction of a giant rocket, in which he hopes to be shot from the earth to the planet Venus.

This is altogether a laudable ambition, even though reports thus far published fail to state just what he expects to do after he gets here or how he thinks he is going to get back. A great many of us, at one time or another, have wanted very much to go sailing off to a distant star.

Indeed, you might say that the yearning to do that is every man's heritage. This is especially true in youth. There are times, particularly when one is young and easily hurt, when the breaking of illusions is so painful that this earth seems rather a makeshift planet, at best, and the unattainable stars shine very invitingly.

This spirit too, is very valuable. It propels men in all manner of pursuits. It causes some to write poetry, to paint pictures, to compose music; it leads others into paths of industrial success, turning them into powerful men of money; it sends still others into public life, making senators, judges and presidents of them.

For no one ever rose far without first becoming dissatisfied with his surroundings. The desire to leap to the farthest star must, of necessity, remain ungratified, unless perchance the Florida man should find his rocket unexpectedly practical; but in his vain efforts to gratify his desires a man will, sometimes in spite of himself, do good service for himself and his times.

So perhaps it will be just as well if this big rocket, proves a dud. If it should be perfected the earth would suffer too great an exodus. Not one of us but would, at some time or other, try his luck on another planet in preference to this one. But, lacking rockets, we stay here and do the best we can—and, unconsciously, make the earth a better place to live.

The Middle of the Road.

The middle of the road man is seldom popular. There is something in human nature which makes us dislike the person who refuses to take definite sides on any disputed question but insists that the proper course is about halfway between the two extremes.

This is unfortunate, for it often happens that the middle-of-the-road man is right.

Consider the Nicaraguan situation, for instance. One party insists that we have no right there at all; another party insists that we should go even further than we have gone and put Nicaragua squarely under the rule of the American flag forever.

We suggest that the truth must lie somewhere between these two extremes. The vast majority of Americans undoubtedly have benevolent feeling toward the Central American republics and want to see them remain free and independent; yet it is undeniably true that constant disturbances such as Nicaragua indulges in are unhealthy conditions for our own back yard.

The middle course! It's so unpopular; yet it's so often correct.

The Short Month.

The calendar reformers say it is wrong to have a short month like February, which usually consists of 28 days, though it is 29 in Leap year, while the rest of the months have 30 or 31. They want 13 months of 28 days each, with one extra day work in somewhere.

Then when that time comes, we shall not need calendars to remind us which are the short months and which the long ones, and we shall know each week on which day of the month a certain day of the week comes.

The irregularity of the months may cause trifling annoyances, but the world suffers from greater troubles, so it does not worry much about this minor difficulty. February has never been one of the most popular months, so most people are not lamenting because it is a short one.

NOW SOON THE SPRING

The Spring
Will Come around
And happy flowers
Will dot
The ground,
And creeks will Trickle merrily
While
Birds sing songs
As cheerily;
While on a trek
To woods or Stream
The entire world will Happy seem,
For Spring brings
Sunshine
To your soul
And you seem Nearer
To your goal,
And thus Rejuvenated,
You
Will find each Patch of sky
True blue;
And so around
The corner,
Friend,
You'll find
Your Spring,
But it
Must end—

And what we mean to say
Is,
The spring of life
Comes 'round each day,
It's scattered
On
Life's right-of-way,
It's just the way
Your eyes disclose
The prickly thorn
Or scented rose;
No day's so
Dull
But what the sun
Will shine upon
A life well done;
And so let Spring come
All the year
It's really up
To you, I fear.

TODAY'S BEST STORY

A young minister at Kansas City, Kan., attended the theatre with his wife Saturday evening. After the show they saw a girl standing alone on the street. "She is waiting to make a date," said the young preacher to his wife, "and I'll bet I can pick her up." "All right," responded the wife, "you try and I'll watch." He tried, made the catch, and a policeman took them all into tow. The preacher and his wife were released on bail, and Sunday night he explained to his congregation that he considered it his duty to keep "such women" off the street. He is 26 years old. Perhaps public morals are improved by such exhibitions. Somehow, the idea back of it is elusive. Ministers may be concerned in "laboratory" material, but whether it is wise to get it in this way may be questioned. As an old chap out in western Nebraska used to say he knew a man once who piled up a fortune simply by attending to his own business. Maybe when this young preacher's congregation gets through with him he will realize what this old man meant.—Selected by SEE, from Omaha Bee.

When a Man Loves

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Escout, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barters her to Ravaot, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Manon's brother steals her for Ravaot. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravaot. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. But Manon seeks him, explains, and they go to Paris again, where they live in dreamlike splendor.

"Oh, Lord!" ejaculated Fabien. "You will have to pardon me, my dear. I will return when I do not have to share you with so many." Fabien hurried to Manon's side and kissed her finger tips gallantly. "Wait!" she commanded gaily. "Help me up first." Fabien lifted her to the side of the great bed. "Thank you—no, don't go yet—my slippers next!" She extended bare, pink little feet and as Fabien fitted on her satin slippers she bent over and kissed him provokingly on the forehead. Turning away with a laugh, before he could imprison her hands, she began struggling into a filmy negligee. Fabien came to the rescue and wrapped her lovely figure in its fragrant folds.

"Now, my lady, will you descend?" he inquired with mock dignity, offering his hand. Manon

touched it gently with her finger tips and with exaggerated grace stepped from the dais to the floor—like a queen descending from her throne.

"Darling, one kiss—" Manon stood on tiptoes with pursed lips. "Yes—now you may go, but come back very soon!" She watched Fabien depart; then turning to the maid with a big happy sigh she said, "Marie, have them come in."

They came. A troupe of morning callers who sat about and chatted while the hairdressers prepared Manon for the festivities of the day. The Abbe Martineau was a quaint little figure. Manon's beauty had inspired him to write verse and the first thing he did was to perch himself on the arm of a big chair, at one end of her dressing table, and indulge in the pleasure of reading aloud while her coiffure was being arranged before his very eyes. It was just intimate enough to please him immeasurably. Pauses in his reading were due not so much to emotion as to intervals in which he sipped wine and times when others intruded for a moment of Manon's time.

The Abbe's presence, on this particular morning, annoyed Nana exceedingly. She did not have any perfume that compared with Manon's and the special bottle she wanted was on the corner of the dressing table where the Abbe interfered with her getting it. In the meantime she glowered at the little man and consoled herself by smelling the contents of every other bottle she could get her hands on. When she found a scent that she liked a generous portion was immediately transferred to her fingers and then brushed across her lips.

"Do you like that odor, Nana?" inquired Manon, who had been watching her with amusement.

"Yes, it is most seductive—what do you call it?"

"It's yours, if you want it," replied Manon generously.

"I couldn't think of it," protested Nana, but she had already decided.

When Fabien entered the drawing room he felt two pairs of piercing eyes centered upon him.

The humiliation and annoyance that had been his before entering the door changed to an air of amused nonchalance. The situation did have an amusing side. Why not play up to it and ignore the danger involved? At least it brought a new and refreshing way to receive his callers.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," Fabien bowed politely as though they were distinguished guests. "I had not expected to have the pleasure of receiving you again so soon!"

The two men plainly showed their surprise at this unexpected greeting and as a result the things they had intended saying came out in unintelligible sputters. One of them began searching his pockets for a paper that it was his duty to serve. Fabien saw the gesture and with an amused twinkle and deliberate misconstruction said:

"Would you try some of mine?" offering his snuff box. "Perhaps you left yours at home."

"We didn't come here to take snuff with you—and you know it!" shouted the angry balliff, at last finding his tongue.

ed to take the crystal and gold bottle as well as the rare perfume. "That is all right, Nana; Fabien will buy more—he gives me every thing I want."

"Yes, I have noticed—I don't see how you manage it," drawled Nana with mingled admiration and envy. "I have never owned as much jewelry as you have discarded."

Manon knew that Nana referred to the Comte De Ravaot's gifts, and it was annoying to have that episode of her life revived. Besides she hated to have anyone think that Fabien had not done a great deal more for her.

Opening a dressing table drawer, Manon took out a handsome velvet case and offered it for Nana's inspection. A priceless diamond pendant glittered handsomely from the rich velvet box.

"Isn't it a darling?" she inquired proudly.

"It is more beautiful than the Comte's ruby necklace." Nana's admiration was sincere.

"Fabien brought it to me last night," Manon lifted the jewel from the box and slipped the delicate chain over her head.

The hairdressers had just completed their pleasant duty and Manon's callers gathered about to inspect her new gift.

Unknown to everyone, Fabien was the most absorbed spectator of the little scene.

Since leaving Manon's boudoir he had wandered about the great house trying to settle upon some way to handle the pressing need for money. His father had disowned him. Thierge was still friendly and compassionate, but his means were limited, and even if he gave up all he had it would not be sufficient to meet their extravagant mode of living. It did not occur to Fabien to live simply, because Manon's nature demanded luxuries and amusement, and he felt that he should be man enough to provide them for her. Also, he loved her in the gay happy moods that were hers in the midst of their present surroundings and some way, some how, he was determined to provide all that her pleasure loving nature craved.

Fabien had not settled on any definite financial plan when he recalled Manon's request to "come back very soon." He returned to her boudoir and chanced to arrive at the open door just as she was showing her necklace. Fabien remained outside, a look of comic dismay on his worried face.

A few days before Manon had described the jewel to him with such enthusiasm that he could not resist surprising her with it as a gift. No one knew better than he how ill he could afford the indulgence. But when he saw what a beautiful picture she made in its reflected glory he did not regret the extravagance. The incident only drove home the fact that he must raise money—a quantity of money—before many more days passed into eternity and carried him along in a hopeless maze of bills and insistent bailiffs.

Fabien tried to put Manon out of his thoughts as he went down stairs to confront the two gentlemen. He knew only too well who they were and what they wanted. Their presence in his home was not welcome and he dreaded the consequences of the enforced interview.

Police Chiefs To Hold World Convention In Colorado Next June

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Feb. 10.—(INS)—The annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs will be held here in the shadow of Pike's Peak, late in June this year. The "coppers" will discuss ways and means of preventing crime and catching criminals, beginning June 25, the sessions continuing through June 28.

Several hundred police chiefs from all over the world are expected to attend the convention.

Detroit Planning Two "White Way" Avenues

DETROIT, Feb. 10.—(INS)—Conversion of Lower Woodward Avenue and Griswold street into "white ways" with 16 times as much light than at present, is being considered by the common council after a petition of property owners of the two streets.

The plan consists of ornamental light poles about 30 feet high with cluster globes at the top. Expense of installation would be paid by property owners.

The Epic of the Air "WE" By Charles A. Lindbergh

CHAPTER XXIX.

On several more occasions it was necessary to fly by instrument for short periods; then the fog broke up into patches. These patches took on forms of every description. Numerous shore lines, appeared, with trees perfectly outlined against the horizon. In fact, the mirages were so natural that had I not been in mid-Atlantic and known that no land existed along my route, I would have taken them to be actual islands.

As the fog cleared I dropped down closer to the water, sometimes flying within ten feet of the waves and seldom higher than two hundred.

There is a cushion of air close to the ground or water through which a plane flies with less effort than when at a higher altitude, and for hours at a time I took advantage of this factor.

Also, it was less difficult to determine the wind drift near the water. During the entire flight the wind was strong enough to produce white caps in the waves. When one of these formed, the form would be blown off, showing the wind's direction and approximate velocity. This form remained on the water long enough for me to obtain a general idea of my drift.

During the day I saw a number of porpoises and a few birds, but no ships, although I understand that two different boats reported me passing over.

The first indication of my approach to the European coast was a small fishing boat which I first noticed a few miles ahead and slightly to the south of my course. There were several of these fishing boats grouped within a few miles of each other.

I flew over the first boat without seeing any signs of life. As I circled over the second, however, a man's face appeared, looking out of the cabin window.

I have carried on short conversations with people on the ground by flying low, with throttled engine, shouting a question and receiving the answer by some signal.

When I saw this fisherman I decided to try to get him to point towards land. I had no sooner made the decision than the utility of the effort became apparent.

In all likelihood he could not speak English, and even if he could he would undoubtedly be far too astounded to answer. However, I circled again and closing the throttle as the plane passed within a few feet of the boat I shouted:

"Which way is Ireland?"

Of course the attempt was useless, and I continued on my course.

Less than an hour later a rugged and semi-mountainous coastline appeared to the northeast. I was flying less than two hundred feet from the water when I sighted it. The shore was fairly distinct and not over ten or fifteen miles away. A light haze, coupled with numerous local storm areas,

had prevented my seeing it from a long distance.

The coastline came down from the north, curved over towards the east. I had very little doubt that it was the southwestern end of Ireland, but in order to make sure I changed my course toward the nearest point of land.

I located Cape Valentia and Dingle Bay, then resumed my compass course towards Paris.

After leaving Ireland I passed a number of steamers and was seldom out of sight of a ship.

In a little over two hours the coast of England appeared. My course passed over Southern England and a little south of Plymouth; then across the English Channel, striking France over Cherbourg.

The English farms were very impressive from the air in contrast to ours in America. They appeared extremely small and unusually neat and tidy with their stone and hedge fences.

I was flying at about a fifteen hundred foot altitude over England and as I crossed the Channel and passed over Cherbourg, France, I had probably seen more of that part of Europe than many native Europeans. The visibility was good and the country could be seen for miles around.

People who have taken their first flight often remark that no one knows what the locality he lives in is like until he has seen it from above. Countries take on different characteristics from the air.

The sun went down shortly after passing Cherbourg and soon the beacons along the Paris-London airway became visible.

I first saw the lights of Paris a little before ten p. m., or five p. m. New York time and a few minutes later I was circling the Eiffel Tower at an altitude of about four thousand feet.

The lights of Le Bourget were plainly visible, but appeared to be very close to Paris. I had understood that the field was farther from the city, so continued out to the northeast into the country for four or five miles to make sure that there was not another field father out which might be Le Bourget.

Then I returned and spiraled down closer to the lights. Presently I could make out long lines of hangars, and the roads appeared to be jammed with cars.

I flew low over the field once, then circled around into the wind and landed.

Held in Remembrance

The city of Troy, N. Y., the birthplace of the collar, cuff, and shirt industry, was practically the home and for many years was the center of the steam laundry business of the country. So general is the recognition of this fact that the name Troy laundry is still retained by hundreds of laundries in the United States and is even seen abroad.

IN SOCIETY

Women's Club Meets

At the meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Thursday night, the speaker of the evening was Dr. Howard Jones. A paper, "The American Indian," on which subject, Dr. Jones is an authority, was given, at the request of the club.

It was entertaining, enlightening and instructive, and every member who had the privilege of hearing it, went away with an entirely new conception of the only real Americans.

The club feels that it owes a vote of sincere thanks to Dr. Jones for a profitable and well-spent evening.

Plan Meeting

The Parent-Teachers meeting of the Pickaway County School will occur on Thursday, Feb. 16, at 6:30 o'clock at the school house. The social hour will begin with a basket lunch, which is to be followed by an interesting program.

Song by all, "America the Beautiful"; devotion by the Rev. F. S. Webb; a musical trio, by Mrs. Ralph Boggs, Miss Mary Radcliff and Miss Ruth McKenzie; a talk on "Founder's Day," by Mrs. Bernard Young; vocal solo, by Mrs. Cliff Mettler; talk on "Health," by Mrs. E. E. Brownell, County Nurse; reading by Mrs. D. E. Dreisbach; and a selection by the musical trio, Mrs. Boggs, Miss Radcliff and Miss Ruth McKenzie.

Concert in Columbus

Those from Circleville who heard Paderewski in Columbus Thursday night, report that the concert has never been equaled in that city. More than 4200 persons were crowded into the Memorial hall, and their applause kept the artist at the piano for three hours of pianism, which is unprecedented in Columbus for this form of entertainment.

One party who attended from Circleville consisted of Mrs. S. T. Ruggles, Mrs. John Bennett, Mrs. Evan Reichelderfer, Miss Abbe Clarke, Miss Miriam Ruggles and Miss Martha Moore.

Shower for Bride

Miss Helen Dumm, who has just recently announced her marriage to Mr. Leslie Rihl, which was solemnized at Greenup, Ky., on April 23, 1927, by Rev. Naps, was very pleasantly surprised by the operators of the Citizens Telephone Co., with a kitchen shower, Thursday evening at her home, 121 Pleasant street. A very delicious three course lunch was served. During the evening, social conversation and music were enjoyed by the following, who helped to make the affair a real success, Gertrude Steele, Margaret Mavis, Mary Howard, Gertrude Huffman, Susie Blaney, Beatrice Hanley, Anna Ryan, Lillian Wagner, Ethel Dewitt, Anna Pursell, Ida Malone, Josephine Stout, Margaret Shadley, Edith Willis, Kathryn Imler. Many beautiful and useful gifts were received by the bride. Mrs. Rihl is employed by the Citizens Telephone Co., and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vause Dumm, of Jackson township. Mr. Rihl is employed as conductor on the Scioto Valley Traction lines, and is the son of Mrs. Rose Rihl, of this city.

Have Noon and Evening Parties

There were thirty-two guests at both the luncheon bridge and the dinner bridge on Thursday at which Mrs. D. E. Mason and Mrs. W. F. Heffner were hostesses. The small tables were decorated for luncheon and dinner, with baskets of sweet peas in pastel shades, and the prize at noon for the high bridge score was won by Mrs. J.

Mrs. O. L. Cartright and Mrs. Charles Owens entertained Thursday evening with two tables of bridge and two of five hundred at the home of the former in South Court Street.

Have All Day Meeting

The Women's Day at the Methodist Church, which is held the 2nd Thursday in each month, was considered a splendid success, Thursday. On this day the Foreign Missionary, and Home Missionary societies, and the Ladies' Aid, have an all day meeting, which gives the members an opportunity to get together.

The meeting began with the Home Missionary business session and program, at which time a chapter in the book, "The Adventure of the Church," was read by Mrs. Harry Griner. Mrs. Charles Rife had charge of the devotionals, and Mrs. Mack Noggle and Mrs. J. O. Eagleson sang a duet.

At noon the ladies aid served lunch to all the members present, and to the public. This was followed by the business session of this society in the parlors of the church at 1:00 o'clock.

The foreign Missionary Society meeting began at 2:00 o'clock. Here Mrs. Jay Wall gave a study talk and Mrs. George Fitzpatrick read an interesting paper. Other numbers were solos by Mrs. J. O. Eagleson and Mrs. Mack Noggle.

Honor Mr. and Mrs. Barnes. Mr. and Mrs. Rom Barnes, of South Pickaway street, entertained with a six o'clock dinner party on Thursday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Barnes, of Terra Haute, Indiana, who have been visiting relatives in Circleville.

At Lutheran Church

The meeting of the Ladies' Society of the Lutheran Church, Thursday afternoon, was opened by the Rev. G. J. Troutman, who read scripture and offered an opening prayer. These were followed by Mrs. Uri Reigel's missionary paper "Climbing the Ladder with Mother on Guard." The discussions which followed were (1) "Upon whom rests the responsibility of moulding the character, and why?" by Mrs. Charles Beck. (2) "At what age

COUNTY BASKETBALL TOURNEY STARTS FEB. 17

Competition Will Be Held at C. A. C. Gym—Finals to Be Played Feb. 25.

The complete schedule for the annual basketball tournament of Pickaway county, which will be held in the C. A. C. gym at Circleville on Feb. 17 and 18, and on Feb. 23, 24 and 25, was announced Friday by Prof. M. C. Warren, superintendent of the county schools.

Last year the tournament was won by the New Holland boys and by the Monroe girls. Both schools have good teams this year and hope to repeat, but they will find their ambitions anything but easy to achieve as a number of the other schools have strong floor squads this season.

On Friday night, Feb. 17, beginning at 7 o'clock, the Washington and Scioto boys will clash in the opening fray, after which the Ashville and Darby boys will compete. Other games that night will be between Saltcreek and Walnut girls and between the Deercreek and Jackson girls.

Continue Feb. 18
The first round eliminations will continue on Saturday, Feb. 18, beginning at 9 o'clock. The boys' games will be between Muhlenberg and Walnut, and between Deercreek and Monroe. The Muhlenberg and New Holland girls also play that morning.

Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1 o'clock, the Jackson and New Holland boys will play. The girls' games will be between Pickaway and Perry, and between Washington and Ashville.

Beginning at 7 o'clock Saturday night, the winner of the Muhlen-

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

A correspondent who has for some time been honoring this column with extraneous advice now comes to the fore with some suggestions regarding chess and kindred sports. Joe Carupa is well known to our readers and needs no introduction. Here is his latest letter:

"Dear Sir:

"I see you published the letter I sent you giving you the dope on the boxing situation. I think you have some sense after all. I will now write you about an idea that I have that somebody ought to jump on before somebody else does.

"I see by the papers that a guy that won the world's chess title is holding out for a bigger guarantee. Well, you can't blame him for that. But the idea I have is why don't they whoopee this situation so it will mean something instead of just being a pain in the neck.

"When he last chess series was fought some people said it was in the bag. I am for that. That is what gave me my idea. I don't believe it was, or it would of been interesting.

"Now that is what I am getting at. If somebody would work up a little noise over the chess situation and say there wasn't any logical contender and all that hokey like you do about boxing or whatever there's a champion of, they could stage a world series at Madison Square Garden. You will say it takes fifteen or twenty minutes to make a move and everybody would walk out on them. Well, try and make Tex Rickard sore by walking out after you've been in. But they wouldn't. They would stay in and make remarks like take your whiskers out of that soup, etcetera, and chess players are very temperamental like tennis players.

"But my idea is to combine some similar sport like wrestling that also takes about fifteen minutes to make a move, and put it in between moves. They could start off snappy with the first move in the chess and then start the first wrestling bout. At the end of ten minutes they could ring a bell to show people there was only five minutes left for Flat Face like to throw his opponent and also that Battling Borajubov only had five minutes to start the second chess move. Then the excitement would get big and finally after the four-minute bell and three-minute bell, etcetera, whoever's turn it was to win would get a fall and vice versa on the chess.

"If you object of this I would say help yourself about the game you have with the chess. It might be ice hockey. That's my idea of another good bag game. I saw a game once and nobody can tell me that anybody could put that little MUCK in the cage if I was there trying to stop it. Also I see a light go up by the cage about the same time every goal is made. You will say that don't mean anything, but don't try and tell me.

"What I mean to say is there are enough saps to get a crowd to anything if you only arrange it properly and inject the element of sport namely that there will be a lot of argument and nobody wins too often. By combining chess and some other game you would: 1.—Introduce a new sport. 2.—Get the chess public to know the other game. 3.—Get the other game public to know the chess. 4.—Thereby win both ways, which is the idea in sport.

"Hoping you will publish this for it is the goods.

"JOE CARUPA."

berg Walnut fracas will play the Perry boys and the winner of the Ashville Darby game will play the Saltcreek boys. The Monroe and Scioto girls will swing into action, after which the winners of the Saltcreek-Walnut and Deercreek-Jackson girls' games will compete.

Resume on Thursday
Hostilities will cease until Thursday night, Feb. 23, when the winner of the Deercreek-Monroe game plays the Pickaway boys; the winners of the Jackson-New Holland, and Muhlenberg-Walnut boys' games meet; the winners of Washington-Ashville and Monroe-Scioto girls' games clash, and the winners of the Muhlenberg-New Holland girls' game meets the survivor of the Saltcreek, Walnut, Deercreek and Jackson series.

The semi-finals will be played on Friday night, Feb. 24, and the finals on Saturday night, Feb. 25. In the boys' finals one team will be from the Washington, Scioto, Perry, Jackson, New Holland, Muhlenberg and Walnut group of schools and the other team will be the survivor of the Deercreek, Monroe, Pickaway, Ashville, Darby and Saltcreek competition.

The final game between the girls' teams will be between the best team in the Saltcreek, Walnut, Deercreek, Jackson, Muhlenberg, and New Holland schools and the winning sextet from the Pickaway, Perry, Washington, Ashville, Monroe and Scioto schools.

Taggett and Waite, of Columbus, will be the referees.

PELTZER WILL SHOW FLEETNESS TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(INS)—Dr. Otto Peltzer, the runner, will fly the colors of Germany tonight in a 1,000 meter race in connection with the Illinois athletic club's eleventh annual handicap track and field meet at the riding club.

Peltzer, the only European to defeat the great Paavo Nurmi, will encounter Ray Dodge and Ray Conger of the I. A. C. and Leo Larrievie of the Chicago A. A. in tonight's job of 1,000 meters.

Among those running under the banner of the I. A. C. is Joie 'come-back' Ray, a crack sprinter of a few years back. Ray, until restored to the good graces of the A. A. U. by the central board last Wednesday, was an outcast. After an absence of two years he attempts to reach the peak again in the two-mile run.

A. A. Stagg, athletic director of the university of Chicago, will referee the entire program of nineteen events.

Many simple things still puzzle scientists. Water, snow and ice, for instance, are the same materials in different form. Water assumes thirst, snow creates it, and ice allays it more than water.

C. A. C. DOWNS NEW HOLLAND IN FAST GAME

Club Boys Come From Behind To Conquer Visitors By 37 to 23 Score.

It looked for a while as though the C. A. C. boys were in for another loss at the gym, Thursday night, when they defeated New Holland, by a 37 to 23 count.

Opening with the second string men the club got off to a poor start. Somehow or other the club boys could not get going. Doing a lot of bad passing and fumbling with New Holland displaying superior floor work over them, the visitors managed to get a six point lead. At this point, Coach Rader sent in the regulars, but even they could not check the boys from across the river, and the half ended with New Holland on the long end of an 11 to 7 score, and it looked as though the club was whipped. Even though the visitors did have a margin of only four points.

The second half started with a bang and New Holland started to pile up points until they had the score 18 to 9. Right here, Capt. Robinson called time out for a conference. After that it was too bad. The club team settled down, and at the end of the third quarter had New Holland's lead to an 18-15 margin.

The last quarter saw the club boys in their true form. They outplayed the New Holland quintet so consistently that it appeared as though they had just been taking it easy. They scored 12 points, while New Holland was gleaming but 5 markers.

Jim Gattrell was high scorer of the game with nine field goals for 12 points to his credit, eight of

during the last 15 minutes of play was perfect. Each man played his position with a precision of a well balanced machine, overwhelming the visitors with its regularity.

New Holland has a good, clean, hard working team, and displayed some wonderful team work in spots.

EIGHT HOLD-OUTS IN GIANTS RANKS

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(INS)—The New York Giants have received the signed contract of Pitcher Fred Fitzsimmons, who won seventeen games last season. Eight players are still outside the fold, however. They include Virgil Barnes, Burleigh Grimes, Frank Hogan and George Harper.

The four hold-outs of the Yankees are believed to be Waite Hoyt, Tony Lazzeri, Earl Combs and Mike Gazella. It was announced that the Yanks would take thirty-five players south, of whom twenty-four will be retained.

TRACTOR BOUGHT BY COUNTRY CLUB

The sporty looking tractor on display at Brehmer's garage is the mowing and raking machine for the Pickaway County club. It won't be long now until it will be running around mowing out the fairways and roughs. It has a rake and a mower that is going to do a lot a business with the blue grass at the club.

This machine will no doubt become a very familiar sight to the golfers as it sneaks up behind the laggards on the greens, and with its engine, draws out the profanity of the unfortunates in the sand traps—if any.

One of the fine features of the new links is, that there are plenty of trees to wrap a driver around, after a graceful slice, and a sparkling stream to toss a mid-iron into after a hectic hook.

FARM STOCK

FEED WORK HORSE BALANCED RATION

The horse is no different from other animals in that the ration should be reasonably balanced in regard to protein, carbohydrates, fats, oils and fiber. It should be remembered that a horse on heavy work requires twice as much protein as the same horse when on light work. The more severe the labor of the horse, the larger must be the supply of nutrients. The stomach of a horse has a capacity of 19 quarts while the stomach of a cow may hold 267 quarts, so it is evident that a horse at hard work cannot well derive most of its nourishment from roughage. Since the ration must not have an undue amount of roughage, this necessitates a large proportion of concentrates high in energy content. When horses are severely worked, the roughage ration is cut down and the concentrates increased.

The standard ration of concentrates for the American horse consists of two-thirds oats and one-third ear corn by weight. Every Saturday night, wheat bran is substituted for oats. The horse is allowed about two ounces of salt a day, but this is never mixed with the feed.

Timothy hay is the standard roughage for the horse throughout the United States. The freedom from dust of good timothy hay commands it as a horse feed and it is an excellent roughage for animals whose sustenance comes mostly from concentrates. A reasonable allowance of timothy is one pound daily for 100 pounds of animal.

Properly cured legume hay is usually more palatable than other roughages, so if horses are given an excess amount of legume hay, there is some danger that they may consume too much. Legume hays are suitable to balance corn or other concentrates low in protein. Legume hays, if they are properly put up so that they are not dusty, may be fed advantageously.

Alfalfa for Brood Sows Is Extremely Valuable

It is a well recognized fact that alfalfa is the best hog pasture crop we have. Every hog producer should have a patch of it for that purpose. He should have more than that; he should also provide alfalfa hay for his brood sows as well as for his fall pigs. The fact is that alfalfa hay should be provided for all farm stock. It can be grown on practically every farm in Iowa, though in most cases lying of the soil will be necessary in order to get a stand, says the Iowa Homestead.

Mature brood sows that are being fed one pound of corn per 100 pounds of live weight per day and one-fourth of a pound of tankage per head per day in addition will eat half to three-fourths of a pound of alfalfa hay daily. The great value derived from the feeding of alfalfa lies in the fact that it gives bulk to the ration and because it furnishes protein, mineral matter and vitamins. Its vitamin content seems to be extremely valuable.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Roosters Mustn't Crow At Night French Court Says In Curious Case

PARIS, Feb. 10 — (INS) — Roosters shall not crow at night. So decides Justice of the Peace Timothee of Marly le Roi, village on the banks of the Seine near Paris, in the most curious case ever presented to French courts for settlement.

Paul Gruyer, an author, now engaged in translating the works of Jack London, filed suit against his neighbor M. Arnaud, a chicken fancier, for $40 damages because M. Arnaud's cocks crowed so strenuously and so continually M. Gruyer was not able to work days or sleep at night.

Justice Timothee awarded M. Gruyer one franc damage, ruling that the roosters should be allowed to crow to their hearts' content during the day but that the author was entitled to complete quiet at night.

The learned justice of the peace suggested that they be cooped up in pens so low that they could not stretch their necks. The justice's recipe is being tested.

Britain Will Nurse $500,000 Gift Until It Reaches $65,000,000

LONDON, Feb. 10 — (INS) — In a hundred years from now the British government will receive $65,000,000 as a gift to relieve the British taxpayer in his payment of the national debt, which includes the war debts.

In fact the treasury has already received $500,000 of this amount. It was presented to the government by an Englishman who prefers to remain anonymous. He gave the sum with the stipulation that it be invested at compound interest for a century, at which time it must be used to help pay the national debt.

This sum invested at 5 per cent compound interest, will amount in 100 years to $65,000,000. The identity of the giver is stated to be known only to four people, including the Prime Minister and Mr. Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer.

New Orleans Ready To Greet King Rex

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 10 — (U P) — Plans for Mardi Gras—famous New Orleans carnival season were taking form gradually as January drew to a close. Preparations already are being made to make this year's celebration one of the most elaborate in the city's history.

Several preliminary balls already have been held or are scheduled for the near future. Society of the Crescent City turns out to these to honor the different royal rulers of the carnival organizations.

The concluding climax to the historical celebration will come Feb. 21, when King Rex, in all his splendor, will parade the streets and masking will be the order of the day. At that time all vehicular traffic will be shut out of the business district and the area turned over to the maskers.

London Americans Plan Lincoln Day

LONDON, Feb. 10 — (UP) — Celebrations of Lincoln's birthday here will be briefer than usual due to the fact that Feb. 12 falls on Sunday.

During the morning a few of the handful of surviving members of the London Branch of the American Civil War Veterans will place wreaths on the Lincoln monument across the street from Westminster Abbey. As is their annual custom, the Veterans will hold a short memorial service at the monument. During the day other American organizations in London and a number of individuals will place wreaths and flowers on the monument.

The annual Lincoln day dinner will be held at the American Women's club during the evening.

Development of Timepieces and Science of Chronology Told By Burns.

Why your watch ticks, when time was first started and how the watch-making has advanced to one of the real scientific industries in the world was concretely and minutely explained before Rotarians at their noonday luncheon in the Boggs hotel, Thursday, by Joe Burns, who is employed in L. M. Butch jewelry store as a watchmaker. Rotarian Press Enderlin introduced the speaker.

Mr. Burns said that the first crude system of recording time was started several centuries B. C., but that it was not until the sixteenth century that the first clock was invented and even then it was not the accurate timekeeper that clocks are today.

Time By Stars
He also elucidated on how the government naval station records correct time by the aid, not of the sun as most people seem to think, but by the stars. There is a difference of four hours in time between the Atlantic and the Pacific ocean in this country, he explained.

"The spring in your watch is more apt to break during the months of June, July, August and September," the watchmaker explained, "due to electrical storms and the condition of the weather."

Just why some watches and clocks keep correct time and others do not, is not always explainable, he said, as the watchmaker is not infallible.

Brehmer Gets Wig
The Swiss watches are superior to American-made watches in many respects, he declared, but now Americans are making watches in some instance that are just as good as perfect timekeepers.

Rotarian Bob Brehmer was presented with a "head adornment" in the way of a wig by Rotarian

Don't Crowd, Girls! Here's Perfect Man!

(International Illustrated News)

ATTENTION, GIRLS! If you're looking for the perfect man during leap years, you don't have to go any further than William Everett Derryberry, star athlete and student of the University of Tennessee.

"A man whose like we have never seen before," was the version of the judges in selecting Derryberry over 15 other candidates to receive the state's Rhodes Scholarship.

Here's why:
1. He was a star halfback at the university for three years;
2. All his grades have been "A";
3. He's the best student Tennessee ever had;
4. He swims, plays baseball, basketball and golf far above the average;
5. He sings, plays in the band, directs a church choir and is a member of the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. cabinet.

Upon finishing his work at Oxford, Derryberry intends to become a professor of English.

Joe Lynch in appreciation of his able services during the past year recalling to Rotarian Bob's mind a certain water glass set which was "almost" presented to him some time ago.

One Dayton Rotarian and several from the Chillicothe club were present.

COMRADES OF VICTIM ACCUSE THEIR EX-BOSS

ed Mallett, Jones and Bivens held as material witnesses and had ordered the release of "Jungle" as an immaterial witness.

Fred Fitzpatrick, Circleville night policeman, told of receiving a report of the shooting from Jones and Wade. He said he reported it to the sheriff's residence but that the sheriff had already departed to the scene.

Says Mallett Sober
The first witness Friday morning was Fred Clark of the W. H. Albaugh company, who told of going after Hill's body. He said that Mallett had assisted him in carrying the corpse to the ambulance on Maplewood avenue and asserted that Mallett was not intoxicated.

Willie Jones then took the stand for the remainder of the morning and when court recessed at noon he was undergoing cross examination by the defense. Jones identified Flint as the slayer of Hill by his voice, dress and face. He also told the jurors of hearing Flint make threats to kill the men who owed him money if they did not pay.

The defense cross examination brought out the fact that Jones is now remembering events and conversation that he did not recall when he testified at the coroner's inquest two days after the crime. Jones said that he was not asked then for the information which he provided at the trial.

The defense was stressing the point that Jones does not now know the time of various events during the day of the shooting, but knew them when he testified before the coroner, when the court ordered the noon recess.

MARSHAL'S WIDOW BURNED

LONDON, O., Feb. 10 — Mrs. Sherman Beathard, widow of the late Marshal Beathard of London, was severely burned about the hands, neck and face when accumulated gas in an oven exploded as a match was ignited. The burns are painful but are not believed to be serious.

SHOOTS HIMSELF

MT. GILEAD, O., Feb. 10 — (U P)—Perry Cook, 69, retired capitalist, shot and killed himself at his home here late yesterday, according to police. Mrs. Cook said her husband had been despondent because of poor health.

wilderness hunter or fisherman. Mr. Stuber spoke of clean sportsmanship as good citizenship, and urged that the heritage of hunting and fishing be handed down to future generations.

Mr. Stuber told of the good work of the fish and game department at Columbus in building hatcheries and re-stocking with fish and game, and of the extensive program planned by the department and the sportsmen's organizations this year. He showed motion picture reels of the state fish hatcheries, demonstrating the work of the fish and game department of which D. O. Thompson is chief.

Several reels of fishing pictures taken in Canada on the French River, and in New Brunswick and other Canadian fishing places, were shown by Mr. Stuber through the courtesy of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Sportsman's Digest, one of the leading outdoor publications of which Mr. Stuber is chief of the editorial staff.

The League of Ohio Sportsmen of which the new organization here is affiliated, has 50 associated organizations in Ohio, and a membership of thousands of farmers and sportsmen in all parts of the state. A Department of Conservation for Ohio like in Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana and other states, is being planned, as the fish and game department has outgrown its place in the Department of Agriculture of which it is now a branch.

All the work of re-stocking, warden's salaries, and entire maintenance of the fish and game department of Ohio is carried on through sportsmen's license money without the cost of a dollar to the taxpayers, Mr. Stuber stated. Ohio sportsmen turn into the treasury of the fish and game department $400,000 per year for preservation of hunting and fish, and for upkeep of the department. The new association will ask for game protector services in this county at once, and an increase of allowance for patrol work of the game protector. The sportsmen have a surplus of $300,000 at Columbus, out of which this can be paid, without cost to the taxpayers.

The League of Ohio Sportsmen was father of the sportsmen's license system in Ohio, the speaker advised. The new association will have a direct voice in the League.

Officers Elected
Officers elected for the Farmers and Sportsmen's Protective Association Thursday night were: E. H. Rausenberger, president; Loring Huffman, vice president; Walter Kindler, secretary, and Felix Caldwell, treasurer. On the directorate were named: Judge Charles Dresbach, chairman; Wilson Dunkle, George Goodchild, R. L. Brehmer, John Walters, Frank Alkire, Earl Rader, Lee Shaner, C. E. Roof and
